CAPONE GETS 11-YEAR TERM

Today

Laval, of Many Races, Idaho and France, Fine Titles, Fine Names, Venus' Birthplace.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AN OFFICIAL dinner at the White House enabled some American newspapermen to study and admire the French visitor, Premier Laval, "close up". There were Ogden Reid, who owns the New York Herald-Tribune; Frank E. Gannett and Paul Block, each owning many newspapers; Frank Kellogg from Chicago, and others.

Laval, officially announced as "the president of the Council of Ministers of France," walked slowly around the White House reception room in which the guests stood, in a row, shaking hands with each. Marshal Petain, called by Gen. Pershing "the greatest soldier that France produced in the war," followed.

Last came President Hoover, shaking hands with all his guests, then walking to the dining room, with Laval beside him.

The President looked weary, and no wonder. A White House official of long experience said:

"I have seen seven presidents, and not one ever worked as President Hoover works."

PREMIER LAVAL and Senator Borah, side by side, with an interpreter translating what each said, formed an interesting contrast, as far apart as the buckwheat cakes of Idaho, from the bouillabaise of Marseilles.

Newspaper reporters who write "You see in Laval's face his French peasant ancestry" would change the description on closer inspection.

You see in the face traces of many nations that have sailed the Mediterranean for 5,000 years, coming in over the Pyrenees, the Alps and down from the North and East.

Who sees only "peasant ancestry" in the face of Laval would see only a peasant woman in the Mona Lisa face.

LAVAL'S EYE is as penetrating as a steel drill, and his face tells nothing of what he thinks. His smile, reflecting the sunshine of the Midi, tells nothing. Don't play poker with him.

He is exactly the height of Vice President Curtis, whose head comes as high as President Hoover's shoulders. But Laval is perhaps an inch or two taller than Napoleon the First, more securely powerful than Napoleon, and he will have no Waterloo or St. Helena.

THE DEMOCRATIC LAVAL had about him the following gentlemen with resounding names: Marquis de Chambrun, Duc de Broglie, Maj. Gen. Count de Chambrun, Marquis de Grasse, Marquis de Rochambeau and Duc de Noailles.

Perhaps Mr. Laval has heard of a certain weakness for titles in this proud democratic country.

The French thought they were rid of titles in the Revolution, but they were not. Such things stick, for if you have nothing else to distinguish you, a title is convenient. When a strong lunged servant roars out "MARQUIS DE ROCHAMBEAU," democracy is impressed.

IF PREMIER LAVAL went to China he would taste birds-nest soup, or shark's fins, and look pleased. Arriving here he tasted ice-water, for the first time, and remarked that it was "a good cure for a Frenchman." He didn't say WHAT it would cure.

If his grandmother in the little Auvergne village near Clermont-Ferrand could have seen little "Pierre" with that glass of water, she would have dashed at him to save him from destruction, mixing some claret with the water, or at least a few drops of Fleur d'Oranger.

It would have amazed sincere prohibitionists to see Laval, with the energy of 10 dynamos, the French Marshal Petain, straight as an arrow at 75, and the others, NOT raised on ice water or ginger pop, who have drunk French red wine all their lives, and show no bad effects.

LONG AGO, Disraeli, British statesman, whose ancestors came out of Asia, and who made Victoria empress of India—Disraeli, to whom Bismarck referred admiringly as "the old Jew"—went to Berlin.

He came back bringing "peace with honor," casually picking up and adding the useful island of Cyprus, one of the largest in the Mediterranean, to Britain's possessions.

NOW THE INHABITANTS of Cyprus are in rebellion, demanding the right to leave Britain and join with Greece. Britain sends airships with soldiers, and that rebellion will be squelched. There is just enough reality to remind you how easily big empires can go to pieces.

A REALLY INTERESTING spot on earth is that island of Cyprus, with its 350,000 inhabitants.

Alexander the Great quarreled about it, St. Paul and St. Mark preached on it, Richard the Lion-Hearted was married on it, and Aphrodite, goddess of love, is supposed to have been born of its sea foam.

The present row is prosaic, having to do with an unpopular tariff.

WE SHALL SEE a real flier when Gen. Italo Balbo flies here from Rome to represent Mussolini, with a squadron of 24 Italian seaplanes, on a trip round the world.

Gen. Balbo, only 35 years old, is Mussolini's air minister, and a real flier.

When he soars above Washington with his 24 planes, our government will perhaps be impressed with the fact that 24 other planes, or TWENTY-FOUR HUNDRED PLANES might some day come on a less peaceful errand.

What would this country,

CAPONE GETS 11 YEARS IN PRISON

Gang Czar Fined $50,000 For Tax Evasion; Court Denies Freedom on Bond

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Al Capone, America's supergangster, was sentenced today to 11 years in prison and fined $50,000 by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. Capone was convicted of income tax fraud by a jury last Saturday night.

Judge Wilkerson ruled that Capone might be given credit on his six months' contempt of court sentence, passed last February and now under appeal when he had served that amount of time in the Leavenworth Penitentiary.

The sentence was more than double the largest ever passed in an income tax evasion case. Jack Guzik, Capone's business manager, was sentenced to five years on similar charges.

Before sentencing Capone, Judge Wilkerson denied the defense motion in arrest of judgement.

Capone was denied bond and remanded to the custody of the United States marshal.

His attorneys filed notice of an appeal.

Capone had lost his jovial self-assurance when he appeared in court today to hear his fate. He was glum and dejected and apparently had little faith that the desperate appeal of his attorneys would save him. It was reported that he was resigned to the idea that he would be imprisoned in the near future.

He had faced a maximum term of 17 years in prison and the $50,000 fine.

County Deal For Wabash Tube Fought

By MARK SHIELDS

Alleging that the County Commissioners had not complied with the law in contracting with the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway to purchase the Wabash tunnel and bridge for a new connecting link between downtown Pittsburgh and the South Hills district that the price was excessive, and that the Commissioners had not told the public or the grand jury the ultimate cost of the improvement, exceptions to the contract were filed today in Quarter Sessions Court.

The exceptions were fined in the names of Newton F. and Emma L. Hopkins, 515 Hill avenue, Wilkinsburg, Allegheny County tax-payers. Their attorney is Louis Caplan, with offices in the Frick Building.

PERIL TO LIVES SEEN

Among other objections to the project is the claim that a two-lane vehicular tunnel would be a "menace to the lives and safety of the traveling public." The proposed roadway is only 21 feet wide, which would constitute a hazard in the event an automobile should stall or be wrecked in the tunnel, the protest declares.

It is further averred that the County Board has no legal authority for incurring the debt, that the County is granted only a deed of special warranty, that too many reservations are granted the railroad company, and that the tunnel and other property had not been abandoned at the time of the contract, which is declared con-

PARLEY SEEKS ECONOMIC CURE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(INS.)—The historic conference between President Hoover and Premier Laval, of France, which may or may not be the incubator of epochal international developments, continued today behind a wall of official reticence, with a rumble of senatorial thunder in the offing.

There was every indication the discussions have been exceedingly frank and all-embracing, with Mr. Hoover making it clear to M. Laval that under no circumstances can the United States participate in the security guaranty that France so ardently desires.

From the seclusion of the White House, where the conference continued until the small hours of this morning, there came only one brief official statement re-

JUDD STORY OF MURDERS ATTACKED

Prosecutor Assails 'Self Defense' Claim, Asserts She Bandaged Wrong Hand

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 24. (AP.)—Branding as "inconceivable" the self-defense story of Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd, murder suspect arrested last night in Los Angeles, Deputy County Attorney G. A. Rodgers charged the woman had made "one fatal error in her story." That, he said, was in regard to the wound in her left hand.

Rodgers said he had witnesses who would testify Mrs. Judd carried her right arm in bandages last Saturday and Sunday. The slaying of Miss Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes Ann Leroi occurred here Friday night, October 16. Rodgers declared:

"The wound in Mrs. Judd's hand for which she was treated in Los Angeles last night was self-inflicted. She apparently forget which hand she had bandaged when she was in Phoenix and when she inflicted the wound herself, she made the error of changing hands."

TWO SAW BANDAGE

Dr. H. L. Franklin, of the Grunow Memorial Clinic, where Mrs. Judd was employed as secretary, and where the victims of the trunk slayings also worked, said he saw her when she arrived at the clinic Saturday morning, the day after the killings, with her right hand bandaged.

H. U. Grimm, who, with his son, at Mrs. Judd's request, transported to the railroad station the trunks in which the bodies were concealed, said Mrs. Judd's right hand was wrapped in bandages at that time.

Dr. Louis B. Baldwin, for whom Mrs. Judd worked as secretary,

PITT TO HELP HONOR ROCKNE

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 24.—They are going to dedicate a football game to Knute Rockne here today, are these Notre Dame footballers, and it looks very much as though the Pitt Panthers are to be elected sacrificial victims of the occasion.

Despite the fine march the Panther forces have made through their schedule to date, crushing under heel Iowa, West Virginia, Miami and Western Reserve, the best that can be accorded the Pitt eleven today is a chance. It may be an outside chance, too, for Notre Dame, despite new cogs in the backfield, boasts what local critics consider the greatest line in Irish history, and if all the great Irish lines were placed end to end, you'd have a tough time getting through 'em. Besides, they have Marchy Schwartz, the great passer and all 'round luminary of last year, who has added A-1 kicking to his

NOTRE DAME AND PURDUE FAVORITES

Pittsburgh Teams Set to Upset Dope in Clashes Here and at South Bend

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

With the Pitt-Notre Dame game at South Bend the outstanding football attraction of the day nationally, local fans are dividing their attention between attending the Carnegie Tech-Purdue battle at the Stadium and listening to the broadcast of the Panthers' tilt, which, incidentally, will be relayed at the Stadium in conjunction with the Tartans' tussle.

As is the case at South Bend, the game here is pretty much of a tossup. Just as Notre Dame is generally conceded a bit of an edge over Pitt in the pre-game doping, so Purdue is expected to enter its battle with Carnegie with the smiles of Dame Fortune trained upon its eleven. However, neither Pitt nor Tech will be fighting a hopeless cause, and each has a chance to spill the dope and come through with a win.

FIRST BIG TEN TEST

Purdue, being a Western Conference team with a lot of traditions and alumni, is drawing a fair-sized crowd to the Stadium in advance of the sellouts anticipated there for the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame and Pitt-Army

BANK PAYMENT EXPECTED SOON

Depositors in the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., which closed recently, are expected to receive 50 per cent of their deposit about November 15, according to the plans of Receiver C. O. Thomas, it was learned today.

About the middle of November, Thomas hopes, he will be able to issue certificates of deposit to depositors, certifying to the amounts of their accounts. The certificates will be honored in liquidation of the bank.

However, the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association, at the time of the bank's failure, announced it would advance 50 cents on the dollar to depositors, holding their certificates as security.

J. D. Swigart, chief state bank examiner, announced today that the State Banking Department had taken over the Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue. The bank had total deposits of $1,500,000 and resources of $2,000,000. In a statement Swigart indicated that the closed bank's liability to depositors might be assumed by the Bellevue Savings and Trust Company. The bank held school savings accounts of hundreds of Bellevue children.

Three broken-hearted youngsters were searching for "Dolly" today.

"Dolly" is a small, black, Shetland pony which Bobby, 10, Kenneth, 8, and Buddy, 6—sons of L. F. Watt, of 629 Seagirt street—have owned for about a year.

A few days ago one of the boys lost a key to the lock on the pony's stable.

Last night, the Watt family went for an auto ride.

When they returned "Dolly" was gone. The lock on the stable door was still fastened, apparently having been opened by whoever found the lost key and relocked after the pony had been taken.

Trade on Upturn, Farrell Tells Steel Institute

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(INS.)—American business today has turned the corner and is on the up-grade out of the depression, James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, told the fortieth annual conference of the Iron and Steel Institute.

The $500,000,000 credit pool created by direction of President Hoover to mobilize the country's credit resources, was one reason, he declared, "for revival of hopes of an early reversal of the persistent deflation of the past three years." He said:

"Here and there are industries which have already experienced requickening impulses of consumer demand. There has been a slowing down of the declining trend of our export trade, and a reversal, last month, of the unfavorable balance of trade."

Frank H. Speller, of Pittsburgh, chief metallurgist of the National Tube Company, was presented with the institute medal for the outstanding paper on the industry during the year. His article was on "Corrosion."

WILMERDING 'PHANTOM' FOES PUZZLED BY JUDGE'S ATTACK

ELECTION LIST PURGE PLEA SCORED

Action An Outrage, Method Unfair, Macfarlane Tells Group Fighting Cheating

Wilmerding's independent political leaders were nonplused today at the reception given their petition to have 250 alleged fraudulent voters names stricken from the registration lists of the Volpe controlled Fourth District of the borough.

Seizing upon technicalities omitted from the petition, Attorney James J. Philpott representing Joseph Capo, Register-Assessor for the district, was successful in delaying action on the petition until Monday.

EXAMINATION ORDERED

President Judge James R. Macfarlane, who heard arguments presented by Philpott and Attorney Mayer Sniderman, counsel for George Munro, chairman of the Wilmerding Independents, the petitioners, ordered the examination of two-score of Philpott's witnesses after the attorney pointed out that the people had been brought in and were prepared to testify.

Attorney Philpott told the court that among his witnesses was one man whom the plaintiff declared was dead, and many others who were alleged not to reside in the borough whereas they had spent a number of years there. In reply, Judge Macfarlane said:

"Well, we'll hear these dead men tell us they are alive, but hereafter don't come galloping into court with a lot of witnesses until the court has time for the necessary arrangements."

PETITION TO BE CHANGED

At the conclusion of the examination, the court instructed Attorney Sniderman to amend his petition so that it would comply with legal requirements, and told Attorney Philpott to prepare his answer to the petition so that both could be filed Monday. Philpott indicated that he will also file a demurrer.

Practically all of Philpott's witnesses testified they voted in the primaries after being properly registered and assessed, and identified others as being bona fide residents of the Wilmerding district.

PLAINTIFFS SCORED

Judge Macfarlane, who said he was impatient with the irregularity of the procedure, commented caustically on the petition during the proceedings.

Turning to Sniderman, Judge Macfarlane said:

"Common decency demands that these charges be proven. You have made most serious charges against the register-assessor. He is charged with a most awful crime. I have heard a lot of cases where they wanted lists purged, but I've never heard such charges as those are. This is a most manifestly unfair method."

Rent Agent, Valet Support 'Mrs. Erlanger' Claim

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(AP)—A witness who said he volunteered to testify "because no one could accuse me of having any ulterior motive," yesterday told a Surrogate's Court of his acquaintance with Abraham Erlanger, theatrical producer, and Charlotte Fixel, 46, former chorus girl, whom he knew as "Mrs. Erlanger."

George Alexander Wenbridge, a real estate dealer, said at the hearing on Miss Fixel's claim to part of Erlanger's estate as his common-law wife that he offered to testify after reading a statement by Samuel Untermyer, attorney for Erlanger's estate, that only friends and relatives of Miss Fixel supported her claim.

Wenbridge said he was renting agent at an apartment house under construction next to the building in which Erlanger lived. He quoted Erlanger as asking that work start later in the day because "Mrs. Erlanger" was on the verge of a nervous breakdown."

Andre Fray, a valet employed by Erlanger for six months, said Miss Fixel gave all the orders and received mail and packages addressed to "Mrs. Erlanger."

John McMitchell, another valet, related that he obtained his position with Erlanger after interviewing Miss Fixel. His duties he said, consisted of dressing the producer "with the help of Mrs. Erlanger," and otherwise caring for Erlanger, then partly paralyzed.

The hearing was adjourned until Thursday.

WABASH TUNNEL PLAN OPPOSED

Commissioners, who frequently have not notified the planners of a project until it was more than half completed.

The charge that the Commissioners have not set forth the ultimate cost of the complete project contemplated is reminiscent of the airport, the original bond issue for which was $1,500,000, but which has been doubled by subsequent action of the Commissioners after the voter approved the bond issue.

Eventually, it is understood, the County Board planned a companion tunnel to the one purchased from the Wabash, and the aggregate cost of the completed undertaking has been fixed by County Engineers at from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000, or a sum comparable to that paid for the Liberty bridge and tubes. Only the $3,000,000 of purchase price and an additional $1,200,000 for probable property damage was cited by the Commissioners to Judge James H. Gray and the grand jury when approval was asked of the project.

VENTILATION PROBLEM

Engineers consulted by Attorney Caplan, among them Hopkins himself, contend that a ventilating system for the present tunnel would cost $500,000. Some engineers say that ventilation cannot be perfect in a tunnel where traffic moves in both directions, and cite the two-corridor Liberty tubes as proof.

It is pointed out that the County plans call for building aprons on the Wabash bridge to provide for four lanes of traffic, which would result in jams unless an additional tunnel is bored to provide for four lanes of tube traffic.

As to the claim of excessive cost, figures have been secured from the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington reciting that the original cost of the bridge was $916,957.05 and of the tunnel $755,961.27. Replacement costs against which Pittsburgh and West Virginia rates are fixed are carried by the Federal Bureau at $1,124,000, less $390,000 depreciation, for the bridge. For the tunnel the replacement cost is fixed at $1,520,000, less $275,000 depreciation.

trary to the County code governing second class counties.

The chief charge of law evasion on the part of the Commissioners is based on the fact that their resolution for the purchase of the property was not submitted to the County Planning Commission, as required by the law creating the latter body. Under County law of the State all such resolutions must be submitted to the planning body at least 20 days before action by the Commissioners.

SEE $10,000,000 COST

So far the Planning Commission never has been officially notified of the project, its only information coming from newspapers and through informal communications from the County Department of Public Works. This practice is understood to have been prevalent with the County

CITY SECURITIES CHECK AWAITED

City Controller James P. Kerr was awaiting today a report from Price, Waterhouse & Co., auditors, on their findings in their checkup of securities held by the city as pledges for deposits in banks.

Kerr has declined to make any statement on results of the check until he has the full facts in hand. He has stated that there has been no actual loss of money, as yet, so far as he definitely knows.

His statement was in reference to $125,000 of unsecured money deposited by former City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley in the failed Franklin Savings & Trust Company. No prosecution of Schooley is foreseen until the audit is completed.

City deposits in banks still operating are thought to be fully secured.

CITY WORKERS AWAIT ORDERS FOR LAYOFF

Hundreds of Jobs Hang in Balance as Department Chiefs Prune Expenses

Nearly 6,000 city employes today were waiting specific orders from department heads for enforced furlough assignments during November and December. The decision to economize by furloughs followed a conference between Mayor Charles H. Kline and his cabinet heads yesterday.

All department directors have prepared lists and each employe will be furloughed for one week in November and a second week in December. Decision on whether hundreds will be discharged will be made next week, it was said.

The action is being taken, according to Council President John S. Herron, to prevent deficits from being carried over into the 1932 budget and because of frozen assets in a number of closed banks here.

Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh announced that all the 1,250 employes of the Police Bureau would take one day off without pay each week for the remainder of the year.

Fire Chief Richard I. Smith said last night he had not yet made plans for furloughing his men.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, said today employes were to be notified Monday of the furlough periods. The entire staff at the City Home and Hospital at Mayview will be affected.

Furloughs Not Forced By Lack of City Cash

The wave of economy sweeping through the departments of the city administration is directed toward a reduction of the tax millage for 1932 and is not forced by the financial condition of the treasury, according to Controller James P. Kerr.

That the pruning of city expenses may be carried too far and so harm the city services, was the fear expressed by Dr. Kerr. He declared that common sense should govern the zeal for tax reduction.

PLENTY OF MONEY

He said:

"The city is in good financial condition and is going to stay that way, provided it is properly administered. There is plenty of money in the city treasury to handle current expenses. Reductions being made in the departments are solely for the purpose of carrying a surplus into 1932 to provide for tax reduction."

The closing of several banks which are inactive city depositories and the consequent "freezing" of more than $1,000,000 in city funds, will not seriously hamper the city in meeting current bills, Dr. Kerr stated. Payroll accounts and other active funds are handled through the active depositories.

The collection figures for the first nine months of this year show that the city collected $17,208,410, compared with $17,699,687 in the same period last year, a decrease of $491,276. If, in the final quarter, the city collects approximately the same amount as was collected in the similar period last year, collections for the year will total $19,756,345.

He said Japan could not produce such an agreement unless it is a forgery and added that Japan is pursuing the same methods in Manchuria today that she formerly did in Korea until it was made a part of the Japanese empire.

BRITAIN, SPAIN ASSAIL CHINA OCCUPATION

Tokio Delegate Refuses to State Nation's Aims; Hot Clash in League Session

By FREDERICK K. ABBOTT
International News Service

GENEVA, Oct. 24.—Slashing attacks by Great Britain and Spain on continued Japanese occupation of Chinese soil in Manchuria, precipitating tart exchanges between the Japanese and British delegates, marked resumption here today of the League of Nations debate on the crisis in the Far East.

The dramatic climax of the stormy session of the council was an acrimonious verbal duel between Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, British spokesman, and Kenkichi Yoshisawa, who represents Tokio.

Cecil attempted to pin Yoshisawa to a definition of the "fundamental principles" involved in Japan's plan for a settlement of the Sino-Japanese quarrel. The Tokio spokesman refused to answer the Englishman's pointed questions as to his government's intentions in Manchuria.

VOTE SCHEDULED

The council adjourned at 11:30 a. m., after an hour and a half's debate, until 4 o'clock, when a vote was scheduled on Japan's proposal for ending the Manchurian crisis.

Lord Cecil, resuming his traditional post as chief of the British delegation following the return to London of the Marquess of Reading, displayed a far firmer attitude in dealing with the Japanese than his predecessor. Toward the close of yesterday's session, he bluntly asked how Japanese bombings in Manchuria "could possibly be justified in any way under international law."

Japanese Army Defies League; Won't Withdraw

TOKIO, Oct. 24.—(INS.)—Japanese military headquarters at Mukden announced today their troops will not be withdrawn from the occupied area in Manchuria regardless of any action that may be taken by the League of Nations, it was declared in official messages received in Tokio.

At the same time the capital heard that 3,600 Japanese troops were to be sent from Korea into Manchuria as reinforcements for those now holding the zone around the South Manchuria Railway.

In this news was seen strong indication there was danger of the military getting out of control of the government.

It was pointed out that Kenkichi Yoshisawa, Japan's spokesman at Geneva, in answering questions about Japanese bombings in Manchuria during the past three days, referred to them as "most unhappy events" carried out "against the will of the government."

porting the state of the discussions, it said:

"Both the President and Premier Laval wish it made clear that the conversations upon which they are engaged are solely in respect of such policies as each of the two governments can develop to expedite recovery from the world economic depression.

"There is no remote basis whatever for statements as to 'demands,' 'terms of settlement,' or any other like discussions. Happily there are no controversies to be settled between France and America. None such exist."

Significantly the White House statement was issued a short time after an open interview with Senator Borah (Rep.), Idaho, granted the French newspaper correspondents accompanying M. Laval at their request.

Borah astonished the Frenchmen by advocating wholesale revision of the Versailles treaty, the Bible of France's whole foreign policy.

MORNING SESSION HELD

There was a brief session at the White House soon after breakfast this morning, after which M. Laval, accompanied by Under-Secretary Mills, went to the Edge home, his Washington residence. Secretary of State Stimson remained closeted with President Hoover.

Secretary Stimson spent more than an hour with Mr. Hoover and then returned to the State Department. Asked if the negotiations were concluded, he replied:

"No."

with its petty "anti-aircraft guns," do to repel a thousand bomb-dropping, poison gas-dropping airplanes, piloted by men with no fear of death?

M. H. Sloan, vice president of Standard Statistics Company, knows a good deal about conditions, and says:

"The worst is past and October will probably have been the lowest month."

More important perhaps is the statement by Gates W. McGarrah, head of the International Bank, who finds Wall street more cheerful.

He is a good judge of the inside feelings of high finance.

IF YOU ARE past sixty, all years above that number are "profit." Life lasts longer, and because there are more old people alive with weakened resistance, deaths from cancer and heart disease are more numerous. The heart, arteries, kidneys, liver and the fighting spirit of the white blood corpuscles diminish, as the years creep on.

There are more people on earth 50 years old now than there ever were.

Not very long ago, in the second biggest city of France, there was not a man or woman that had reached 50.

And Montaigne's great friend La Boetie, dying, congratulated himself on having reached the fairly old age of 35.

MISS VERA HELMSTADTER

Italy Fetes Rulers We' 35 Years Ago

ROME, Oct. 24.—(AP.)—King Victor Emanuel and Queen Elena, who, with 31 years on the throne, have had the longest reign in modern Italy, celebrate their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary today at San Rossore.

Already telegrams of congratulation have begun to arrive from rulers and heads of governments in almost every corner of the globe.

Throughout the kingdom, the Italian tricolor will be flown and public buildings will be illuminated.

The Italian rulers intend to observe the anniversary quietly, in accordance with the King's dislike of personal display. They will have with them their daughter, Princess Maria; Queen Giovanna of Bulgaria, who is observing first anniversary of her marriage to King Boris. Crown Prince Humbert, preparing for his transfer in November as general of the military area of Naples, will not be present.

King Victor, now 61, and Queen Elena, 58, are in excellent health. Wherever they go they are immediately recognized, for the Queen is 6 feet tall and the King is about a foot shorter. They were married in 1896, when Victor Emanuel was Crown Prince and Elena was a Princess of Montenegro.

SMILES OF BABY CHEER LINDBERGHS, BACK FROM ORIENT

FLIERS RETURN TO HOUSE OF MOURNING

Eventful Trip Climaxed By Morrow Death Ends With Cross-Country Hop

International News Service.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Oct. 24. — Innocent, happy baby smiles of their son today lightened the sorrow of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh in the house of mourning to which they returned abruptly from their Oriental cruise because of the death of Mrs. Lindbergh's father, Senator Dwight W. Morrow.

They landed at 9:24 last night at Newark airport after having made a cross-continent flight in storm and fog from Victoria, B. C., in 36 hours 12 minutes. Their actual flying time was 19 hours 9 minutes.

They traveled during the day from Rock Springs, Wyo., making several intermediate stops.

MET AT AIRPORT

The Lindberghs were met at the airport by two cars from the household of the late Senator Morrow.

Baggage was deposited in one car and the Lindberghs entered the other. A flat tire halted the car bearing the Lindberghs at the outskirts of the airport and they transferred to the second machine and continued to the Morrow estate.

Col. Lindbergh drove the second car himself. He refused police escort saying he wanted to "go quietly."

Mrs. Lindbergh wore a plain blue dress and blue hat with a white band. Both looked tired although they seemed in the best of health. Col. Lindbergh was tanned a deep brown.

TOUR EVENTFUL

The Oriental tour of the Lindberghs, conceived as a vacation jaunt, became the most eventful flight of the couple's career before their round-the-world plans were cut short by the death of Senator Morrow.

Spilled into the Yangtse flood delayed by Alaskan storms and an Oriental typhoon, forced down again and again in Kurile fog, and mobbed by starving Chinese, the Lindberghs had many experiences.

The flight, which took them up through Canada in its early stages, started from New York July 29.

Film Beauties Accuse Each Other in Court

GERTRUDE ASTOR

Gertrude Astor Holds Home Damaged by Vivian Duncan

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—(INS.)—Two golden-haired beauties of the stage and screen faced each other in rapid succession from the witness stand in Municipal Judge William J. Palmer's court today.

It was a suit in which one of them, Gertrude Astor, seeks to collect $1,170 assertedly due from Vivian Duncan-Asther, of the famous Duncan sisters, as rent and damages upon a house and furniture, which Mrs. Asther had leased.

By a curious coincidence, both were charmingly gowned in brown.

Under a law of civil procedure, Mrs. Asther first took the stand and underwent questioning. She was then followed by Miss Astor. Mrs. Asther, who returned recently from Germany, where she gave birth to a daughter, appeared with her husband, Nils Asther, film actor.

Miss Astor testified:

"There were cigaret burns all over the room and on the piano. There were holes in my beautiful rugs, silverware and linen were missing and the place was just in terrible condition."

WINNIE JUDD'S OWN ACCOUNT OF SLAYINGS

Exhausted, Suffering, She Tells of Battle for Life After Being Shot in Hand

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24.—"Sammy shot me . . . I struggled with her . . . the gun fell out of her hand . . . I got it. I shot her. Mrs. Leroi hit me with an ironing board and I shot her, too."

Weak and suffering from the pain of her wounded hand and the exhaustion of her five days of hiding, Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd last night told her own story of the double killing in Phoenix Friday night of last week, that was discovered when two trunks and a suitcase yielded their ghastly secrets in a Los Angeles baggage room Monday.

STORY IN OWN WORDS

She told it to her husband and her attorney, Louis P. Russill, while a stenographer took down her broken words. Here it is as told by those who heard it:

"The three of us were in the house together. I was talking to Miss Samuelson, and we were discussing Miss Leroi.

"Suddenly Miss Samuelson became infuriated at me. It seemed that she thought I was going to say something about Miss Leroi.

"Everything happened so fast after that, that I have difficulty in remembering details of what occurred. In her rage, Miss Samuelson left the room, and came back immediately.

"I saw that she had a gun in her hand. She was rushing toward me. I was petrified with fear.

"Before I could do anything, or even scream, she fired, and the bullet hit my hand.

"We fought desperately. Finally I managed to get my hand on the gun, and shot her. I couldn't see what Miss Leroi was doing while this was going on. It all happened so quick."

"The first thing I knew after I shot, was that Miss Leroi was pounding me over the head with an ironing board. I tried to dodge her blows, but couldn't. I was getting weaker and weaker. Then I shot her, too.

NOTHING TO EAT

"After I got to Los Angeles, I walked and walked and walked until it was dark. Then I found an unoccupied house. I went into it. My hand was hurting me terribly.

"I stayed there that night in the unoccupied house, and all the next day. I was afraid to even put my nose out of doors. I had nothing to eat that day, nor Tuesday night. I stayed inside all the time.

"Wednesday I ventured out, went to a drug store, and bought a package of quick dye. Then I went to a public rest room, locked the door and took my dress off. I soaked it in the dye and then for a whole hour I switched it back and forth in the air, until it got dry enough for me to put back on.

"The next day when I bought a newspaper and saw in it my husband's appeal for me to surrender, I knew than that everything was all right."

4-Alarm Fire Razes Baltimore Wharf

BALTIMORE, Oct. 24.—(AP.)—Fire which started in a rubbish barrel on Pier 8 in the Baltimore Harbor destroyed that wharf, damaged the two adjoining and threatened others on each side.

Four alarms sent to the scene every available piece of apparatus in the south and central districts, and fireboats swept in from the harbor side to fight the flames as they licked through the old oil-soaked wooden structures.

Killed Pair to Save Own Life, Mrs. Judd Says

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24—(INS.)—"I shot to save my life."

Winnie Ruth Judd, the most hunted woman of the decade, thus explained today why she killed her chums, Agnes Leroi and Hedwig Samuelson, and shipped their bodies from Phoenix, Ariz., to Los Angeles in two trunks and a suitcase.

Weak from hunger and tormented by a bullet wound in her hand, the "phantom" woman killer surrendered to police last night, ending a five-day hunt.

During those five days the 26-year-old will o' the wisp remained in hiding in an abandoned house in Los Angeles. Only three times did she venture forth into the street, and only once did she partake of a scanty meal, according to her own story.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE

While detectives today, behind locked doors at police headquarters, attempted to wring from her an official confession and additional details, Mrs. Judd's dramatic narrative to her husband, Dr. William C. Judd, and her lawyer, Louis P. Russill, was unfolded to the world.

The fatal struggle occurred in the Phoenix apartment occupied by Mrs. Leroi and Miss Samuelson, according to Mrs. Judd's narrative, related as she lay on the operating table at the police receiving hospital having the bullet extracted from her left hand and the wound treated.

She declared Miss Samuelson became infuriated at her, apparently believing she was going to say something about Mrs. Ler. "Sammy" rushed at her with a gun, she asserted, and shot her in the hand.

SHOOTS ADVERSARIES

They struggled, Mrs. Judd related, and the weapon fell to the floor. She seized it and shot Miss Samuelson.

Then, she continued, Mrs. Leroi struck her over the head with the ironing board and she shot her, too.

Mrs. Judd's narrative then continued to relate how she stuffed the bodies into the trunks and came to Los Angeles after checking them as baggage.

FATHER'S LEAP SAVES FAMILY IN FIRE

Man Jumps 5-Foot Gap in Rescue as Flames Sweep West Aliquippa Hotel

Five children were carried to safety by their parents when fire swept through the old Aliquippa Hotel, Ninth street, West Aliquippa, early today with an estimated loss of $8,000. George Opshenik, one of the tenants, jumped with his wife and two children, Edward 5, and Richard 3, across a five-foot areaway from the second floor of the burning building to the roof of an adjoining garage. A policeman was overcome and a fireman cut by flying glass.

ESCAPE ON LADDERS

The other children, Henry 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Quinto Manvina, and Mary 4, and Mike, 6 months, children of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Chabala, were carried to the street on ladders erected by firemen, when their escape was cut off by dense clouds of smoke and flames.

Patrolman Edward Todd, trapped on the third floor of the building, was carried to the street by firemen when he was overcome by smoke. The fireman, Joseph Dulich, 21, of 609 River avenue, was cut by flying glass.

The fire originated in the basement of the building and swept through the Hoffman real estate offices, Frank Dicinni's barber shop and the Lieberman pharmacy on the ground floor and burned through to the second and third floor homes.

Dense clouds of smoke, mingling with the heavy fog which hovered over Ohio Valley towns early today hampered firemen, according to District Fire Chief William Walters.

The origin of the fire has not been determined.

The loss was estimated at between $7,000 and $8,000 by Fire Chief C. B. Ransom.

HUNT CONVICTS; 3 DEAD IN CHASE

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 24.—(AP.)—A mid-afternoon prison break followed by the slaying of a policeman and one convict and by the suicide of another, had police hunting today throughout Northern New Jersey for two other prisoners who got away.

Four convicts, armed with two pistols, scaled the walls of the state prison yesterday, commandeered two motorcars and fled in opposite directions, two men in each car. The two who headed north had evaded capture early today, despite the wide-flung police line stretched across their supposed path.

The other two met death when cornered by police at Oxford Valley, Pa., less than two hours after the prison break. A Philadelphia policeman, Joseph Campbell, was wounded in an exchange of gunfire. He died several hours later.

The convicts killed were James McGrath, mortally wounded after he had fired the shots that dropped the policeman, and Jack Wierman, who shot himself as officers closed in upon him.

Dog Rescued From Ledge, Trapped Five Days

LOGAN, W. Va., Oct. 24.—(AP.)—There was happiness in the Kistler community today for Tuner, John Brown's prize foxhound, was rescued from a mountain crevice, in which he had been entombed for five days.

After countless attempts to rescue Tuner from a ledge 30 feet below the surface of the mountain, a device perfected by James Vance pulled the dog from his perch.

Vance nailed together a dozen or so pickets from a fence, and on the end attached a big hook. After some fishing he got the hook under Tuner's body and up came the hound, while residents of the entire countryside cheered the rescue and Tuner did some plain and fancy tail wagging. He appeared none the worse for his imprisonment.

Tuner disappeared last Sunday. Brown took his hunting horn and began a search, blowing the horn at frequent intervals. He climbed high up on a mountain and blew a long blast. A reply came from beneath his feet. Thirty feet below, perched on a 10-inch ledge of a narrow crevice, was Tuner.

For the next five days residents of the district endeavored to remove Tuner. In the meantime the dog was fed with food lowered in a sack, but water could not be sent down because the pails bumped against the jagged sides of the crevice and overturned.

Wife Loses Fight to Rule Ill McCormick's Riches

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 24.—(AP.)—Mrs. Katherine Dexter McCormick lost before the State Supreme Court her long fight to be appointed sole conservator of the person and multi-million-dollar estate of her mentally incompetent husband, Stanley McCormick, son of Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper.

The high tribunal ruled the Cook County Appellate Court erred in reversing a Circuit Court decision denying her the conservatorship for lack of jurisdiction. The decision held service of suit notice upon Stanley McCormick by publication and mail did not confer jurisdiction upon Illinois courts while he is confined to his estate in Santa Barbara, Cal.

The conservatorship fight has waged through Illinois and California courts, with Mrs. McCormick opposing her husband's brothers, Harold and Cyrus, Jr., who were appointed co-conservators with her by a California court.

In March, 1930, Mrs. McCormick filed a petition to have her income from his $47,000,000 estate increased from $162,000 annually to $420,000. At that time, she said, a total of $3,000,000 had been spent to cure her husband of his mental ailment.

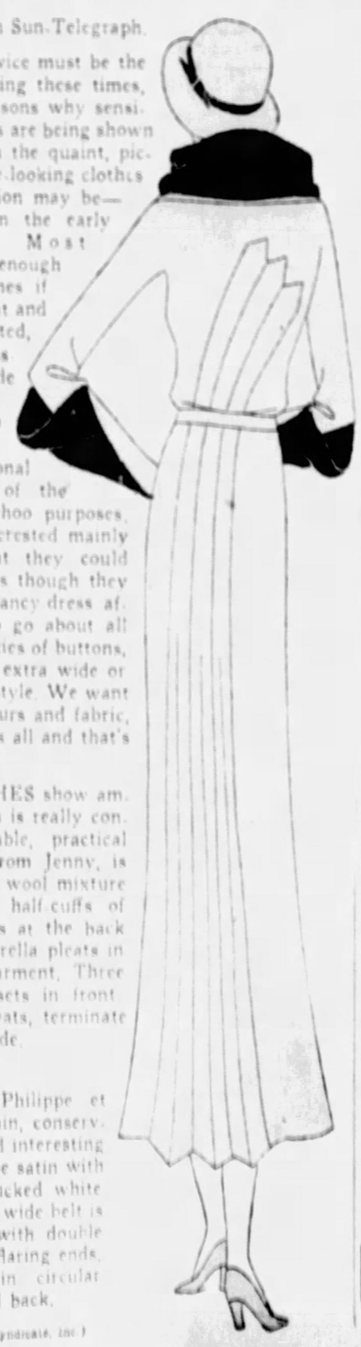
STYLISTS FEATURE PRACTICAL CLOTHES IN NEW COLLECTION

Sketched in Paris



Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—Service must be the watchword of clothes during these times, and this is one of the reasons why sensible-looking, modern clothes are being shown and worn now rather than the quaint, picturesque or rather strange-looking clothes—whatever one's reaction may be—that were featured in the early autumn collections. Most houses were wise enough to include such clothes if only for the excitement and publicity they created, but they were business like enough to include excellent clothes that showed no relationship with the past. And of course, while professional buyers ordered some of the period clothes for ballyhoo purposes, private buyers were interested mainly in modern clothes that they could wear, without looking as though they were rehearsing for a fancy dress affair. We don't care to go about all day in coats with quantities of buttons, dolman sleeves that are extra wide or any other exaggerated style. We want line, fine details, good furs and fabric, superb tailoring. That's all and that's enough, isn't it?

TODAY'S SKETCHES show ample evidence that Paris is really concentrating on wearable, practical clothes. The coat, from Jenny, is of a brown and beige wool mixture with collar and deep half-cuffs of beaver. Curving insets at the back terminate in three umbrella pleats in the lower part of the garment. Three similar but shorter insets in front, instead of ending in pleats, terminate in a large pocket at one side.

ALTHOUGH THE Philippe et Gaston frock is, in the main, conservative, it has much chic and interesting details. It is of black crepe satin with collar, tie and cuffs of tucked white chiffon and real lace. The wide belt is of patent leather, black, with double silver buckle and unusual flaring ends. Spiral piecings ending in circular godets are found front and back.

RADIO WIDOW :-: Husband Seldom Home, Wife in Movies :-: IN THE THEATERS :-: Critics Say What They Think About Talkies

Paul Busy With Orchestra, So Margaret Livingston Makes Pictures

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24.

Introducing Margaret Livingston, probably the country's foremost radio widow.

The new Mrs. Paul Whiteman says she came to Hollywood to do some picture work, because she saw Paul only at breakfast and at dinner. His radio duties carry him to the office at 9 a. m. and at night he directs his band at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

"I understand," she says, "I'm not complaining. The marriage of two professionals can't be like an ordinary marriage. Paul and I are very happy with ours.

"By coming out here I can make a few pictures and go back and see him whenever I want. I'll be back with him on Thanksgiving and will stay until after the first of the year."

Marg. Livingston

As told yesterday in this column, Margaret also owns a Los Angeles apartment house and is building another. Her business interests require trips to the coast.

One of the things not generally known is that she and Whiteman met as a result of her work in the F. W. Murnau picture, "Sunrise." Doubtless you recall her weird dance in the fog-shrouded marsh. This dance was done to the strains of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." When the picture was released Whiteman asked to meet her. Later, they renewed their acquaintance when both were working at Universal.

SNAPPY ANSWER

B. P. Shulberg's quick-witted-ness won loud plaudits at the recent party where the movie picture publicity men were hosts to the press.

Allowing himself to be questioned by anyone in the crowd, Shulberg fired back pithy answers on many problems of the industry.

Finally spoke up a Hollywood magazine editor:

"I've been trying for a week to make an appointment with you through your secretary. What's the matter?"

"She's being tactful," snapped Shulberg. "I told her I didn't want to see you."

The re-generation of Myrna Loy will continue in her first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Once seen only in siren roles she now is to play the quiet sister in "Emma." This is Marie Dressler's starring picture.

After 33 Years Actor Plays Same Role

Back in 1898, Edgar Norton, then 22 years old, left the London stage for New York to join Richard Mansfield's famed company playing "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The young actor was given the role of Poole, Jekyll's servant, and played the part for three years with much success. Now, after a lapse of 33 years, Edgar Norton again is playing the role of Poole, but this time before the cameras in a screen adaptation of Stevenson's famous tragedy.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 24.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Bernard Shaw has come out in favor of prohibition. He is also a vegetarian. Shows you what the influence of a good woman will do—even on a writer. Lady Astor, a staunch believer in prohibition, accompanied Shaw to Russia. I read a story of Edison's funeral and I said this is the making of this writer for it was a masterful bit of human re-por'. Then I saw it was by Arthur Brisbane. Well that was one funeral where you could use up all your eulogies and then you would only have a few introductory remarks. Yours, WILL.

Ann Devoted Heroine in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Play's the Thing," said William Shakespeare. But he never saw a talkie.

Nowadays the play is liable to be anything and the actors are the thing.

An example of this is "Devotion," a new film in the Stanley. Ann Harding and Leslie Howard are co-starred. And thanks to their dramatic talents a trivial little story about an English wallflower, who masquerades as a governess just to be near the man she loves, turns out to be pleasant entertainment.

Miss Harding manages a Victorian disguise rather well and she injects a slowness and timidity into her portrayal that fits in with her makeup. It is to be regretted, however, that some Victorian timidity and slowness also extend to the production proper.

You get the idea that the director wanted to consume a certain number of reels with only one motive in mind—that of keeping Miss Harding and Mr. Howard apart. Well, eventually the certain number of reels are consumed and the fadeout is happily clinched.

Good work in supporting roles is done by Robert Williams, O. P. Heggie, Louise Closser Hale, Dudley Digges and Alison Skipworth.

The characters are all English people. So there's tea with every reel.

An added feature on the program is an interesting "Believe It or Not" film, featuring Robert L. Ripley. This time Mr. Ripley presents some novel sights in Egypt, including a stone statue that talks and the world's first tabloid newspaper.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

WHILE WRITING A COLUMN the other afternoon, I paused for a moment to ask the city editor if a person can be slightly crazy. To myself, my meaning was clear. If a man is crazy, that's all there is to it. At the moment, I didn't see how it was possible for a person to be only slightly off balance.

The city editor's immediate response was to tell me that I was the living answer to my own question. I had expected something like that, however, so I wasn't disappointed. But the more I thought of the question, the more I was fascinated by it.

I wonder how many people of Broadway are slightly goofy? Sometimes, as I meander along and watch those who pass me, I think that nine-tenths of us are a trifle demented.

Being as a mail from the country and have then look at our night life. Have him look at the lines of movie fans who will stand in the pouring rain for an hour in order to get into a bum movie. Have him watch the wild-eyed theatergoers battling for theater tickets. Have him sit in night clubs drunk but sober and make him see with rattles that a baby would scorn.

There's only one danger in such a course. The guy from the country would probably grow to like it.

Let me give you a concrete example of the thing at which I'm trying to drive. Walking up Broadway one evening, I stopped in at the United Cigar store on Forty-second street to get a package of cigarets. I was going over to the Paramount at the Garden and had a little time to spare. So I stood in the center for a few moments.

A man stepped up to me. He was rather dirty. Long hair and needed a shave badly. He touched my arm.

"Say, buddy," he murmured. "I got a strange thing to ask you."

"Yeah," I responded. "What is it?"

He looked at me earnestly. "Can you spare a dollar?"

This was something new. Things can't be so awfully tough when the "can-you-spare-me-a-dime-for-a-cup-of-coffee" guys go around asking for bucks.

"A dollar!" I repeated. "What's the big idea of asking for a dollar stake? Wouldn't you be satisfied with a quarter?"

He shook his head. He hooked his arm and commenced to walk me slowly down the street.

"Mister," he asserted, "I got to admit this is a very big request. But you can tell by the way I'm talking that I ain't no regular panhandlin' bum. Mister—with me this is a case of life or death. I simply got to have one dollar."

I grinned at the mug.

"I understand all that. And maybe you can have the dollar you want so badly. But first I have to know what it's for."

He propelled his head vigorously in a negative fashion.

"That's exactly what I can't do," he stated. "I can't tell you the whys and wherefores. All I can say is that I must have it. Muster—if you can spare it—for heaven's sake let me have it."

The man puzzled me. I didn't see any reason for parting with a hardly earned dollar—but the man was getting my goat. What the devil was he driving at anyhow? Unusual things interest me.

"What's it for?" I questioned.

Coke.

He laughed.

"If you think I'm a rookie, mister," he chirped, "you ain't very much of a judge.

"I'm tellin' you the plain and simple truth, buddy, and if you can't come through, just let's forget about it. I need a dollar and I can't tell you what it's for."

He paused. Then, suddenly, he turned on his heel.

"I guess there ain't no use sayin' more, Mister," he shot over his shoulder. "I took up too much time as it is. Jus' let's call it a go. Sorry to trouble you."

He commenced to walk away. I caught him by the collar and dug into my pocket.

"Big boy," I said, "I'm always interested in new rackets and I'm glad to pay to see one worked. Here's your buck. And you don't have to tell me what it's for, either."

He grabbed the dollar. Without so much as a thank you, he was gone.

Shortly after, I was at the fights. But my mind wasn't on the doings. Things I wondered what that guy was doing with the dollar. I unfolded the yarn to S. Jay Kaufman, who was sitting beside me, and asked for his opinion. He thought the man simply wanted a couple of drinks. I couldn't agree.

The fights were over at 11 o'clock and I still had time for a shave. I walked over to my barber shop, gave my coat to Jimmy, the handsome attendant, and slipped into a chair. There was but one other customer in the shop and he was in the rear. I gazed at him.

It was the man who had hit me for the dollar! His face was still dirty and his hair was still long. But he was getting a manicure!

John Charles Thomas, a very popular American baritone, opened the Art Society concerts last night in Carnegie Music Hall. In a boyish speech, he insisted that he should be only an entertainer, not an educator, but Thomas sings so well that in spite of himself he will be an educator in the primitive sense of the word.

That tiresome nasal quality which had become almost an affectation in Thomas' singing has almost disappeared, and now his voice rings true and resonant. As an actor he does allow stage effects to intrude occasionally, but his characterizations are always skillfully imagined, and he is learning more and more to color his voice, so that purely musical values are deepening.

Of the three Beethoven songs, the "Neues Leben" was best, the first two lacking Beethoven's sincerity. The Schumann and Brahms were entirely to the singer's liking, but his French group all lay nearer his heart and understanding. Both Moussorgsky songs were archly sung and declaimed. And few singers can project English as does Thomas. One can calmly discard program notes and enjoy the music.

There were a generous lot of encores, among them "Trees," "Lindy Lou," "Gwine to Heoben" and "Clouds," not nearly so successful a song as the same composer's "The Green-Eyed Dragon," an unusually amusing and fantastic story and happy music. Lester Hodges played good accompaniments, and a group of shockingly stupid piano music.

These Are Sign Language Days In Washington

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

President Hoover and Premier Laval had a nice friendly chat with gestures.

Mr. Laval adenoids no English. Mons. Hoover nasals no French.

Everything was going fine until Mons. Hoover tried to order an egg.

They used signs for everything. When Herbert rubbed his thumb and forefinger together that meant war debts.

When Laval turned his pockets inside out it signified no checkee, no laundry.

Mr. Hoover held his nose and that was an inquiry about business conditions. Mons. Laval responded graphically by doing the dying swan while the interpreter played the piccolo.

The consensus of opinion on the gold standard resulted in that good old pantomime, London bridge is falling down.

Then Mr. Mellon arrived and they played shadowgraphs on the wall. Mons. Laval pinned the tail on the donkey and they wound up with an international banquet of bird seed and animal crackers.

Greta Garbo Loves on And on

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Many years ago a novelist of the first rank, David Graham Phillips, wrote a fine novel entitled "Susan Lenox: Her Fall and Rise." It was called "daring" then—today with a little sugar-coating and a few blackouts it got the nod of approval from a Pennsylvania movie censor. It shows how Greta Garbo loves Clark Gable and in spite of all she loves on and on. He can call her names—he can become a drunken bum—but Greta loves on and on.

George Seibel

Phillips intended his story to show how a woman can surmount all degradation and dishonor. The picture shows how she can skip across them. Incidentally it also shows how Greta Garbo can wear many different sorts of gowns and look alluring in all of them. Alluring and forlorn—for no heroine ever had so many sorrows since "Way Down East."

THE MODERN TOUCH

The story has been considerably modernized with a clever police dog and expressions like "boy friend" and "baby," "berries" and "Oh, yeah." And there has been a lot of symbolism put in—railroad trains and whirling lights and all the tricks the Germans and Russians have smuggled into Hollywood.

But the ambitious effort, with its realistic rainstorm and New Orleans cabaret, compels admiration by the tireless variety it displays. All to make a glamorous background for the glamorous Greta, with her many sorrows, through all of which she keeps loving on and on—although the sap portrayed by Clark Gable leads you to wonder why.

AUDIENCE ALSO PLAYS

Somehow the audience yesterday thought it was part of the show. In wintry scenes they shivered aloud. A merry gentleman laughed long "hoo-hoos" at some of the saddest scenes. When a Hal Roach comedy of the house-wrecking sort was shown, babies cried as a flowerpot hit a policeman. The Voice of the Organ brought forth some very disorganized singing.

And when the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph brought George Bernard Shaw upon the screen, a sweet young thing inquired, "Who's he?" Tell it not to Shaw!

But they all knew who Edison was when his funeral was shown, and the victorious Bluenose ran before the wind, leaving everybody breathless.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Peter Arno makes his debut as a producer in "Here Goes the Bride," which he wrote after being in Reno long enough to obtain one of the best Nevada divorces. The Arno product comes to the Alvin Monday with Clark and McCullough as stars. This is his second association with the theater, his first having been as collaborator and scenic designer of "The New Yorkers" last season.

Herb Williams, Jack Benny and Chas. Chase head the comic department of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," booked for the Nixon the week of November 2. Betty Veronica, the Collette Sisters and Vivian Fay will be prominent among the damosels, who, of course, include the beauty brigade of show gals. Tickets will go on sale for this attraction Monday.

State of Siege Set After Student Row

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 24.—(INS.)—The Paraguayan government has declared a state of siege to last until March 1 as a result of demonstrations by university students, according to advices from Asuncion.

The students, opposed to the policy of the government in the dispute over the Chaco boundary, stoned the residence of President Jose Guggiarai as a culmination of the disorders, in which students battled with policemen.

Charge Raider Used Masonic Credentials

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 24.—(AP.)—A charge that George Land, a federal prohibition agent, used his Masonic credentials to gain entrance to speakeasies was made to United States Commissioner Harry E. Harding. Lawrence Van Bicklen and Lillian Rowell, held on liquor law violation charges, made the allegation.

Land denied it, saying his companions, working as government informers, provided entrance.

Dozen Awnings Burn On Apartment House

More than a dozen awnings in the rear of the four-story Weber apartment building, at 2910 Vokel avenue, Dormont, were damaged to the extent of $300, this morning, when sparks believed to be from the building's incinerator, ignited the awnings, according to Fire Chief William Elcock.

A Columnists's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Your remark on the air that Nathan Swift, now at Yale, and of the renowned meat packing company, is secretly married to the dotter of the president of Armour—rival butchers—is denied in a statement by her father to all city desks . . . He says they are merely good friends . . . Well, mebbe so. But I sent the old man a wire for you, suggesting that he send a copy of the denial to the groom, who started the report . . . Eugene O'Neill's trilogy of plays begins at 4 p. m. and will last for days! . . . Your tickets came. I phoned them you couldn't get up in the middle of the night like that and wouldn't be there, but that the paper would assign someone to cover the thing . . . I see they honored Edison by saying that he started all those things, but nobody thought to remind the world that Edison is also to blame for the Questionnaire!

J. Altman, of 45 Astor place, called. His son, Julius, it appears, reads you a lot and Mr. Altman hopes you will put in the paper something about the boy (who also is a student at NYU) disappearing from home . . . There is much grief as a result and his poor mother is in bed very ill because of his running away like that . . . Mr. Altman says will you please say for him to his boy (18) not to "be such a wise guy" and either write or phone his mother? . . . I told Mr. Altman you certainly would help all you could . . . Plain Talk, the magazine that shouldn't have failed, starts anew with the Nov. issue . . . Izzy Elinson just phoned . . . He said that The Business Show at Grand Central Palace boasts of having everything needed in business but that he couldn't find one booth featuring aspirin!

One of the town's better-knowns has been kidnaped.

Ran into Lupe Velez at the Casino last night . . . Chomming person . . . And so comical with her broken English . . . Lupe happened to say: "Ain't it beautiful?" and Peggy Fears counselled Lupe not to "ain't it," but isn't it beautiful?" . . . So Lupe said: "Isn't it beautiful, ain't it?" . . . Well, you would have had a heartache watching the way Lupe drove Gary Cooper crazy . . . Gary happened into the place with Countess Prasso (who is Yurrop-bound with Gary this or next week) . . . Morton Downey asked what songs the crowd wanted and Lupe said "Mexican Rose," "Melancholy Baby" and "Just One More Chance" . . . Mo'n obliged with all three torch tunes and Gary had to leave . . . I think he still goes for Lupe in the huge manner . . . After you cracked at the broadcast that Lupe was going on the same liner—that would carry Gary and the Countess—Lupe switched to the Majestic . . . Why do people who still care burn each other up that way? . . . Her "romance" with John Gilbert doesn't excite me . . . She's a pretty shrewd guy, Lupe, but you know that.

Your old pal of the hoofing days, Tommy Gordon, is dead . . . Tony DeMarco opens in the St. Moritz Grill Saturday night . . . I hear that the Roxy is to be renamed The Edison . . . Contempo is the name of a new literary journal in North Carolina . . . They feature reviews of new books by the authors! . . . The Times ran Shaw's speech, but buried it behind the finance pages.

Better check on this. I hear Dorothy Knapp, once Earl Carroll's heart, is married to J. Edmonds, of Nat'l Broasting Company . . . Babs Morlan is betrothed to F. C. Copeland, son of the Senator . . . The Ethel Lawrence-Fred Boehler thing is dead . . . The city hasn't done a thing about the ruined Maine monument on the Circle. It is a sight! . . . Sam Fain, who has written song hits such as "My Future Just Passed," is a N. J. motor vehicle inspector . . . One of the American Legion Posts will sponsor the sale of cider by unemployed legionnaires. Do you know anyone who would like to help Dean Van Clute keep running his book shop at 145 Waverly Place? . . . He once was a pro baseball player and illness knocked him down—now a cripple . . . He was set up in this shop by a rich woman whose whim for philanthropy died quickly—and needs another lift. Maybe you know somebody . . . Harold Heaton phoned. Said to call your attention to the symbols atop the Waldorf-Astoria—Pepper and Salt Shakers' . . . Coney Island probably will be a memory in a few years . . . that is, as an amusement park . . . I hear Luna Park did so well the past season it sold out to a gas company . . . By the way, are the tobacco manufacturers advertising cigarets or cellophane?

Gov. Roosevelt's lackadaisal attitude toward certain office-holders is changing the political sitchee-ay-shun and upsetting the anticipatorians no end . . . Kate Smith wants to know if you want one or two ditties from her on your next b'cast . . . Better keep it down to one, because you only did four minutes last week . . . How come you haven't said a thing about the Balconades in the Grand Concourse? Swell floor show . . . A group were gabbing about the show business last night and all were amazed to think that Broadway hasn't had one drama hit yet . . . The advance lists, by the way, promise nothing outstanding . . . You critics probably will pitch a no-hit season, at that . . . Say something about the record made by the late Knute Rockne . . . Mrs. Rockne will get all the royalties . . . That's a good boy.

Nothing else much . . . Leopold Stokowski, the conductor, likes to get his hair waved, and Mrs. S. gets disgusted and won't let him sometimes . . . Call your mother . . . Did you hear about the Hollywood star who urged friends to introduce her to Peggy Joyce? . . . Peggy screamed: "My heavens, no not her! All she wants is to count my wrinkles and go back to Hollywood with a scoop!" . . . Ran into Hizzoner, the Mayor, last night . . . I told Jimmy your one wish: That if you died before he did, for him to be sure and come to your funeral so people would think you had one friend . . . Jim said that that's one thing he wouldn't do—for fear he would be killed in the crush! . . . Put that in your rap-book! . . . And so until next Friday at this time I remain, as ever, Mrs. Cambridge's very bad little girl, Ruthie.

Shifty Wife Bad as Shifty Business Partner

The Little Gal has whispered "Yes" . . .
And Larry wants to Tell the World . . .
But she won't let him. Why? Well, according to her it would just kill mamma! Besides, Mom might cut off the glad rags and groceries if daughter came right out and admitted she loved him. So—it must all be kept secret.

But can she love me and act that way?" asks Larry, beginning to have some tiny doubts about his goddess.

Do you think she can?

"Dear Sally:

I banged over to see the femme the other night and we agreed to accept your advice about something that has been bothering me for quite some time. Here's the Scandal Sheet:

1—Steady company for over a year.

2—Engaged secretly. Fraternity pin.

*3—No two-timing.

*4—We go out twice a week.

*She goes to college.

*5—I work. believe I'm not.

*Now I want to make our engagement known. But she says no. Here's why. Her mother and mine care for each other in a big way, like two African wildcats, and I take a sore tooth in her home. Sure, I'm darn good for a boy friend, providing that's all I'll ever be. But that is not my intention. And if we ever hint marriage down goes mother's loot.

The girl friend tells me I am unfair because if she did let on that she was engaged to me now it would kill her mother and the G. F. wouldn't get her clothes, books and whatnot that goes with college if she did anything without Mama's consent.

S DOUBTFUL

"Now I admit that's a good argument, but my beef is this:

Will she make a date to get married in the future regardless of Mom? Answer: No.

Can't she get engaged now and gently bet Mom later? Answer: No.

Will she get married right away? Answer: No.

Well, does she honest-to-goodness love me? Answer: Yes. I give up. What do you think? Larry.

Does she love you, or doesn't she?

Of course she doesn't, big boy, if she won't take her place beside you. As a matter of fact, she doesn't love her mother either, or she wouldn't be two-timing her by a secret engagement.

LIKES TO DODGE

She only loves herself, and if you did manage to herd her to the altar, she'd be a washout as a wife, and you can tell her so with my compliments.

Then why does she hang onto you?

Why does she eat chocolate sundaes?

Because she gets a big kick out of both forms of indulgence.

The excitement of ducking and dodging puts a big bang in the general dullness of her life, so she keeps both you and Mama dancing and dangling without giving either one of you any honest-to-goodness affection or loyalty.

Personally, I'm curious to know why a real egg like you wants a china substitute like her. You wouldn't tolerate such frank selfishness or disloyalty in a man friend. But I'll bet my hat you think it's cute and feminine in her. That's what most men think, when U.s Girls play fast and loose with 'em, until they find out that a shifty wife is just as bad as a shifty business partner.

I dare you to show her this article!

And if she doesn't like me calling her names, tell her not to deserve them, and I won't!

"OLD-FASHIONED GIRL"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

What a difference must come upon the face of our cartoons that are drawn around the good old stand-by "The Old and The New," or the "Girl of Then and Now."—and such like titles! We still can caption them, "Where Are the Snows of Yesteryear?" but the girl of Then is changed, and so is the girl of Now. It looks suspiciously like the snows, or some of them, of yesteryear, 'way back, are falling again! The picture that I made any old time up to this year, and labeled, "old-fashioned girl," is almost the same girl I am using now for my very latest. And the girl who five years agone was the last devastating, electric word in modern girldom occupies the space titled "old-fashioned girl."

And she looks it, doesn't she? You do not know how very old-fashioned until you flip back the pages of the pictures you made of her in her hey-hey-day, as I have. My eyes and my mouth registered wonder, that this young creature that once worried the world so, could now be "our old-fashioned girl." She will never be what we have always meant by that phrase—demure, Quakerish, timorous, coy. But she is OUT-DATED, and that makes her our old-fashioned girl in spite of the astonishing skittishness of her ensemble. Could she ever be quaint? No—but she's dowdy.

How funny she looks with that skirt slapped off above her knees. And wasn't she wild? And ill-mannered? Where are the short skirts, the abandon, anywhere save on the stage. Where is the Black Bottom of yesteryear anywhere at all?

Into the circle of contrast put the flapper of other days and under her slightly simple-minded face put "Old-fashioned Girl." Then make an elegant creature, hatted, gloved, and contoured, graciously and romantically, and under her less-made-up face which is trying to look the intelligence that she has or is trying for, set the title "Modern Girl." And there's the same well-known cartoonist mainstay, but with their portraits reversed.

Do you like the new woman, who is slowly evolving right before your eyes? I do—with a cheer.

Curious, that ability of women, to change their posture, their habit, their voice, their manner, their very character, with their costumes!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Mourning Letter-Paper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please inform me if it is in good form to use mourning paper, or may I use this paper? I am 18. Am I too young for mourning form? How long a period should I use it? May I still write letters to friends I know, or would it be better to wait until after the mourning period? EIGHTEEN.

The paper that you used to write to me is quite all right for you to use in writing letters now. Or plain white would be in even better taste. I do not advise you to use mourning paper. To begin with, mourning paper is not much used nowadays, and you are of an age where it would not seem necessary. Of course, write letters to your friends; the writing of letters during mourning depends only on one's feelings. And probably writing to your dear friends and having them write to you will be a very great solace.

Mourning now is usually very light, and often not at all. Of course, you would not wear startling colors, but neither is it necessary for you to wear black or black and white, unless you really wish to. The way one conducts oneself and the way one feels in one's heart are the real evidences of the right attitude, rather than the clothes that one wears.

Do come again and do let me help if you think that I can. Will you?

Never "Excuse My Glove"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Should one remove one's glove when shaking hands? I have heard the expression, "Excuse my glove," is this correct? What is the correct thing to do?

2. My husband died some months ago and, of course, when I meet people they make an expression of sympathy. I am always at a loss to know what to say. Most of the time I am so touched that I cannot make a reply. Do you think they think I am rude? P. R.

1. Never should one, either a woman or a man, say, "Excuse my glove." If a woman is going to shake hands with a man, it is not necessary for her to remove her glove, and therefore, of course, she does not "excuse" herself. A man is expected to remove his glove, and he should do it, not ask to be "excused."

2. If you just say, "It is very kind of you," that will be enough and your friends will be sympathetic and understanding about your not being able to say more.

A Sad Error

As the next hand shows, it may be one thing to bid a hand perfectly, and quite another to obtain the full trick value in play.

Z bid only 1-No Trump although his 14-point count plus his holding all four aces fully justified bidding 2-No Trumps. Of course Y overcalled with 2-Diamonds, whereupon Z jumped to 3-No Trumps, holding the contract.

A's opening lead of his fourth-best club was won in dummy and Y's ten diamond was led and held the trick. A refused to win the trick because he was afraid that Z still held another small diamond, so that winning the trick would give the declarer five diamond tricks later on. When B failed to cover dummy's Q with the missing K of course Z should have played his A then back his low diamond and kept that suit going until the holder of the K had to play it. Then, with the king of clubs as a re-entry to dummy, the declarer would have won as a minimum one spade, one heart, three club and five diamond tricks, scoring four-odd and 150 points added for four aces in one hand.

Failing to obtain a cover for dummy's queen Z carelessly let V hold the trick, effectually blocking the run of diamonds. All he could do was to lead a small card from Dummy's play his ace, enter Dummy with Y's good club and clear diamonds by again leading that suit with A at the bat. That player declined to add Z by opening another suit. A led a club and put Z in.

Glaring at dummy Z saw that he might gain entry there in case both opponents would fall for a very ancient trick. He led his 3 of spades, which A was obliged to win. The latter hesitated in his two good clubs forcing Z to let go one heart, then A shot back his last spade. Hoping that B would try to win the trick Z played low from dummy, but so did B, forcing Z to win the trick in his own hand. Z had left only the ace of spades and the A-J of hearts. He took his two good aces, then yielded to his adversaries the last trick. Going down one trick instead of winning one trick over his same contract was a handicap on in learning how to block the free run of dummy's good suits.

Competent After-Care Essential in Paralysis

During the past few weeks I have written several articles on infantile paralysis. Knowledge of the after-care of this disease is important as knowledge of the disease itself. Today I shall tell you some things about the necessary care of a person who has been afflicted with this disease.

Dr Copeland

It has only been within recent years that the importance of the after-care of infantile paralysis has been realized. Disablement by some form of permanent paralysis has often been avoided by proper treatment in the early stages of the disease.

While the patient still shows signs of fever and pain, the body should be placed in such a position as to prevent as much as possible any strain or undue activity of the involved muscles. Immediately after the acute symptoms have cleared up it is important that a very careful examination be given to determine whether or not paralysis has resulted. If paralysis has taken place, it is necessary to determine its extent and what particular muscles are involved.

Then the muscles must be so protected that instead of becoming weakened, they will be strengthened. Often it is advisable that a plaster splint or plaster jacket be applied. This may be difficult and cumbersome for the patient at first, but usually it saves much suffering in the future.

In an extreme case it may be necessary to operate. Many of these operations have been successful, removing whatever [illegible] operations should be done only under the care and supervision of men who have had a tremendous amount of experience in this work.

Another beneficial method of treating cases of paralysis is by means of various electrical applications. These treatments are usually followed by massage and special exercises.

Most cities have hospitals and clinics specializing in this work. These establishments are often called "reconstruction clinics." It is their purpose to restore such disabilities as loss of function in a limb. A great deal of money has been donated for this important work. The charge for treatment is minimum.

Do not attempt treatment for the correction of any disability unless you have been advised to do so by a physician. Massage and exercise must be begun under expert supervision. When it is done improperly or too strenuously, damage may result.

It is very important that anyone who has suffered from a recent attack of infantile paralysis receive competent treatment at once. Do not neglect this condition, for as time goes on it becomes more difficult to overcome the disability.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Small squares of gauze or cotton kept in a closed glass jar are convenient for applying witch hazel after the cold facial rubbing in the morning.

When applying hair tonic, keep in mind that what goes on the hair is good stuff lost. It is the scalp that needs the invigorating, glowing preparation. That's why scalp massage is highly recommended.

Hank and Bill Carry Off the Meeting

As Lillian and I entered the living room where she had left the boys, I was ludicrously reminded of something I had once read of the customs of plains cattle when menaced by an enemy, how they formed a ring with bodies close together, heads thrust out before them, in challenge.

It so happened that our men-folk were grouped in such a curve at the opposite side of the room from the door. Harry and Dicky were standing on either side of Bill and Hank, who were so close together that they seemed to be arm in arm. Between Dicky and Bill, Junior's head was thrust forth from his body as close to Bill as he could get and not actually jostle him, while Roderick occupied a similar position between Hank and Harry. The small boys had promised to say nothing of the burned trousers, but they patently meant to miss nothing of the effect of the boys' new toggery.

I was glad to see that Mary forgot her mocking gaiety in genuine sisterly feeling when she spied the boys.

"Oh, hello, there!" she called and made a little rush toward them. They met her more than half way across the room and by the time she had embraced and kissed them warmly, Marion was standing close behind her.

"Hello, Bill! Hello, Hank!" she said, giving a hand to each of them. She was not in the least embarrassed and the boys, below their own confusion and their heightened color and the boisterous hand-shake which Hank gave her, contrasted with the diffident way in which Bill clasped her hand and apparently forgot to let go of it until she drew it away with a little laugh.

"Look here, you kids," Mary's voice struck in, saving Bill's embarrassment. "What's the matter with you? Here ever since winter, when those cadets were at the party, I've been waiting to see you boys from the waist. Don't they teach you that up at Worcester? If they don't, Aunt Madge," she rattled on, turning to me, "I'd bring 'em home."

"Sure, we know how," Hank said, unmindful of Bill's scowl, and I realized that he was far less embarrassed than his older brother. In his grandmother's picturesque vocabulary, he was the "brasher" of the two boys.

He stepped back upon a line with Bill and hit his brother a smart blow upon the shoulder.

Straighten up, old kid," he admonished, "and give the girls a treat. Ready, one, two, three."

He bent from the waist in what was a fairly creditable imitation of the real thing, and Bill, red to his ears, was but a second behind him. When they straightened up again, both Mary and Marion clapped their hands delightedly, a procedure which Junior and Roderick immediately imitated, with the unerring facility of small boys for getting into the center of things.

"Do it again!" they chorused, but the next instant each was held aloft wriggling. I had seen Dicky wink at Harry, and was not surprised at the effective method they had devised to remove the obstreperous younger lads from the limelight.

"Come out on the veranda," Mr. Underwood said, "and we'll teach you the real way to do that stunt."

They were borne away patently divided between disappointment and pleasurable anticipation, and Bill wiped his forehead, muttering an expressive "Gee!" But Hank turned to Marion.

"Got any new dance records?" he asked.

"I don't know," she answered. "I haven't been home very long."

"Depends on what you call new," Mary said. "We haven't been doing any dancing since Easter."

"No new ones since then?" Hank demanded, plainly horrified. "Police! Say, kid, it's lucky we brought those along. Let's get 'em."

"I'll go." Bill moved his long legs swiftly toward the door, and we heard him taking the steps two at a time. He was back almost as soon as he had gone, with a group of phonograph records in his hands. Hank put out his hands to take them, but Bill did not appear to see him and stopped short at Marion's side.

"Do you know these?" he asked diffidently, and Lillian gave me a delighted pinch. Bill was not as slow as he had appeared at first.

Marion bent over them attentively.

"These two I know," she said, "but I've never heard the others. They look awfully interesting. Are they?"

I paid a mental tribute to her tact. She had assumed that the boys now were dancing, although she must have had a vivid memory of their panic-stricken refusal to join in the Christmas revels.

"They're swell!" Hank struck in. "Put one on, Bill, and we'll have a try at it."

My arm again felt Lillian's prodding fingers, and I caught back a smile at Hank's strategy. With Bill busy at the phonograph he would be able to dance first with Marion.

But as Bill opened the phonograph and put on the record, Katie's voice sounded from the doorway:

"Dinner is served, Missis Graham."

-:- Household Hints -:-

There is nothing so soothing as hot milk to the very tired person. It should be heated to the scalding point, a little salt added and drunk as hot as possible. It is a nerve quieter and a sleep producer.

To remove grass stains on outdoor flannels, take equal parts of the yolk of egg and glycerine and apply it to the stains, letting it remain for an hour or so. Then wash the flannels in the usual way.

Dip a knitting needle into the milk you suspect of having been watered. If there are no particles adhering to it when you remove it you may be certain that the milk has been watered and is poor.

Question a Day:

Is it really true that the Mills Brothers, Negro quartet, simulate all those instruments with their voices? Tell us something about them.—Janet W. Rochester, Pa.

Answer—A guitar is the only instrument used by the group. They're really brothers, born in Piqua, Ohio, and recently of Bellefontaine, Ohio. John, 21, is the bass, tuba and third trumpet and also plays the guitar, a mail order model that cost $6.25 C. O. D. Herbert, 19, is the second trumpet, saxophone and trombone. Harry, 18, carries on with the first trumpet, baritone solos and "licks" or hot intonations. Donald, 17, does a bit of everything. Harry and Don like New York immensely. John and Herbert prefer Cincinnati, where they used to sing over WLW. John and Herbert left their girls in Cincinnati.

Speaking of ponies, Ben Bernie, the "Old Maestro," was asked once if he ever regretted he had not followed in the footsteps of his father, who was a blacksmith.

"If I had shod them, instead of betting them, I'd be money ahead," Ben replied.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Hardest job of the jazzbos is to provide something new for their public. Otherwise their public is apt to stray to new pastures. The public is never satisfied. And a maestro today who caters to the bright young people and those who are not so bright can't afford to rest upon past laurels. He must be ever on the hunt for novelty and change.

The public of the Viennese waltz kings no sooner bestows its patronage upon the soft, languors than it sets up a clamor for the musical hot tamales of Cuba and the Argentine. When the hot tamales become tiresome the maestros will be ready to turn the torso-tremblings of the jungle.

Probably the figure most alert today to public restlessness toward dance music is Meyer Davis, if for no other reason than because he guides the destinies of more than 100 bands. As the mass producer of dance steps he must be as much on the watch for new ideas to hold or increase his followers as an automobile maker or a movie director. Right now he is concentrating chiefly on the new Waldorf where he has established experienced, energetic Joe Moss and a group of tunemakers who know their musical onions all the way from Dvorak to Donaldson, who can, if they want to, play Donaldson in the spirit of Dvorak.

Moss has an advantage upon many of his fellows in the baton battalion. He has real musicians under his wing, not just a group of college boys who know only the bleats and oompahs of Tin Pan Alley. His musicians may scorn the jazz of the day, but they have to play it or else starve outside Toscaninin's door. Playing it, they give it more charm and feeling than you would think possible, than even Park Avenue thinks possible.

At frequent intervals the musicians done with Donaldson, trot out an assortment of Cuban music instruments, proceed to make hey-dey while the calcium sun shines. And all the while bright young people and those not so bright welcome the change of pace, show the latest idea in eye-peering, cheek-grazing. Ideas they would have smiled at disdainfully a year or so ago, were they the work of the dear old hoi polloi at Coney Island.

KOMIC CLUB'S FUN ATTRACTS THOUSANDS

Newly-elected Officers Preside at Meetings In Theaters of District

Thousands of children were assembled today in the Warner theaters, holding meetings of the various chapters of the Warner Theaters-Sun Telegraph Junior Komic Clubs. In a majority of the theaters officers were elected last Saturday and these boys and girls were leaders in today's meetings.

Officers are elected for a term of four weeks, at the end of which time a new group of boys and girls takes their places on the stages of the theaters.

Only a few weeks old, the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Clubs have grown to almost unbelievable proportions. The principal reason for this popularity is that at the meetings every Saturday morning, in neighborhood theaters, everything is done to give the members a good time. There are stage attractions and a picture designed especially for the amusement of children, many attractive prizes and surprise features that cannot be named without spoiling the fun.

NO DUES REQUIRED

There are no dues in this unusual club and there are many advantages to becoming a member. For 10 cents members may see the regular picture scheduled for the theater the day of their meeting, and in addition to this participate in all the privileges of the club, see the special stage and picture attractions and be eligible for the many prizes.

In the near future big rallies will be held and real treats planned for the entire membership, regardless of whether they attend the meetings. Boys and girls who attend four out of five meetings a month and have their cards stamped at the theater where their chapter meets, will be entitled to free admission to the big show to be given at the Stanley Theater Sunday afternoon, November 15.

MOVIES TO BE TAKEN

On that gala occasion the children will assemble at the Sun-Telegraph office and, with flags and banners flying, march in procession to the Stanley Theater. Along the route motion picture cameramen will be stationed, and the pictures taken will be shown, not only at the Stanley Theater, but at each theater where a chapter of the club has been organized.

Watch this column for further announcements. If you miss a day you may miss something interesting.

MEMBERSHIP FOR OTHERS

If you cannot attend chapter meetings, fill in the blank form on this page and mail it to the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Both the Warner Theaters and the Sun-Telegraph know that there are little shut-ins who read this column every day, and they have provided this means for them to receive their membership cards and buttons.

And in this way many chapters will be organized in neighborhoods and cities and towns where there are other theaters for chapter meetings.

Nurses' Association Executives Meeting

A meeting of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania State Nurses' Association, which holds its annual convention here next week, was to be held this afternoon at the headquarters in the William Penn Hotel. Miss Esther J. Tinsley, president of the association, was to preside.

The Alumnae Association of Mercy Hospital will entertain the executive committee and the advisory board at a dinner at the Pittsburgh Field Club tomorrow night.

Blind Helps Blind Safely Across Busy Street

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 24—(AP.)—Mrs. Margaret Wilson, calculating machine operator, blind since birth, stood on a busy intersection here, waiting for some one to help her across the street.

A man stepped up and asked:

"May I go across with you?"

Mrs. Wilson replied:

"I'd be very glad if you would."

Safely across the street, the man thanked Mrs. Wilson. She said:

"Why, I want to thank you."

The man continued:

"You know, when one has been blind as many years as I have it is a mighty big favor to have someone help him across the street."

'DOLE' OPPOSED FOR WEAKER RAILROADS

Propose Pool Be Regarded As Loan, Not Gift, That Dividends Be Omitted

By MERRILL S. RUKEYSER

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 24.—The principal railroad presidents of the country meeting here at the annual convention of the Association of Railway Executives, in giving the official answer to the recent rate decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, decided to ask the commission to reconsider its ruling.

The gist of the decision is that railroads should be permitted to increase freight rates 15 per cent in order to stave off bankruptcy. The railroads propose that the aid granted by the proposed pool be regarded as a loan to the weaker roads and not as a gift. It was further informally suggested that while being helped in this manner the weaker roads be restrained from paying dividends.

The rate decision which to enable the railroads to survive the present credit crisis undertakes to give the carriers in increased freight revenue about one-fourth as much as they asked for in their petition for a 15 per cent rate increase, aroused strong opposition in the minds of executives of the stronger roads.

Mr. Rukeyser

MAKE RESERVATIONS

But in view of the emergency and in the light of need for prompt action, these assembled hired men—the railroad presidents of the country—would not accept the responsibility for rejecting the commission plan. They recognized a flat turndown would doubtless result in their turning the weaker systems over to the sheriff.

Accordingly they hit upon the ingenious plan of seeming to indorse the commission plan in principle while asking for "certain modifications." Officially they were in the position of approving the commission's scheme of relief with important reservations.

The association has appointed a committee to play the unprecedented role of going down and asking the commissioners to explain more fully the meaning of their elaborate decision. Beggars cannot be choosers, and the railroads hope by absolute trading they can get a more satisfactory deal.

DUBBED SOCIALISTIC

The commission's plan for creating a $100,000,000 pool to enable the weaker roads to meet their fixed interest charges was informally dubbed socialistic by some.

In a resolution presented to the general meeting by the advisory committee it was proposed that a modified railroad relief plan be formulated which should be based as far as possible on the principle of self-help.

More specifically the railroads propose that the aid granted by the proposed pool be regarded as a loan to the weaker roads and not as a gift. It was further informally suggested that while being helped in this manner the weaker roads be restrained from paying dividends.

The rate decision which to enable the railroads to survive the present credit crisis undertakes to give the carriers in increased freight revenue about one-fourth as much as they asked for in their petition for a 15 per cent rate increase, aroused strong opposition in the minds of executives of the stronger roads.

Government Fixes 8-Cent Value On Cotton

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The government has placed an 8-cent value of eight cents a pound on cotton accepted as collateral for crop loans to protect Southern farmers with acreage cuts.

This action was taken by the Agriculture Department to encourage holding the new harvest from already glutted markets and to help—just as the crop management is designed to do—the purchasing of necessities and payment of debts and other obligations.

Heretofore the department has accepted cotton at various values which now range from 10 cents for even grades to 10.005 cents for [illegible] staple cotton.

Stock Exchange Tactics

Large Selling for Tax Purposes Unexpected This Year

Although there has been considerable selling for tax purposes during November and December in past years, market observers now hold the opinion that such liquidation in the next two months will be neither large nor important as a market factor. It is pointed out that quite a few interests with long positions sold out stocks during the weak periods this year and thus established losses for income tax purposes much earlier than usual. If this view is correct the market will not be compelled to face heavy selling in this connection before the end of the current year.

Private advices received from important quarters in England by several leading commission houses which have important affiliations abroad are that there is a confidence of the success of the national government at the British elections to be held next Tuesday. This would be construed as favorable in this country, although banking authorities are confused as to what influence the success of the national government would have on the price of the pound sterling.

Considerable significance is being attached to the indications of a change for the better in the attitude of Europe toward conditions in this country. Only a short time ago there was considerable doubt regarding the stability of conditions in this country and the American dollar. However, this has been altered, judging by the fact that there has been a cessation of gold withdrawals while France has resumed buying bills here. A return of confidence abroad regarding the United States is important.

After experiencing a further flurry of selling pressure in the early part of yesterday, though holding generally in a narrow range, railroad stocks staged something of a rally in the early afternoon. The rebound coincided with announcement that a large number of the train service employes of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern had agreed to take a voluntary cut of 10 per cent in wages until such times as the road was again able to earn sufficient profit to meet its fixed charges fully. Wall street has been hearing considerable of the possibility of railway employes volunteering to take a wage cut, and was inclined to accept the Gulf employes' action as the first break in the solid front. The rest of the afternoon was spent in endeavoring to ascertain if the workers in that class were affiliated with the brotherhoods in any way.

Remarks of leading steel industry officials at semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute afforded the market little in the way of encouragement yesterday. Those who expressed their views were, it might be said, more hopeful than actually optimistic. Even Mr. Schwab, long regarded as the "super-optimist," striking a note of caution in his remarks. The Bethlehem head was particularly emphatic in decrying the race for new production facilities which, in a word, he termed uneconomic and unnecessary. He pointed out that even in 1929, the banner year for steel output, when some 54,000,000 tons of steel were made, plants were working at only the equivalent of 80 per cent of the present indicated 67,500,000 tons capacity.

The report of General Motors for the September quarter showed preliminary forecasts, setting net between 20 and 30 cents, had been fairly accurate, the actual report showing net of $16,898,062 available for common dividends after preferred deductions, or the equivalent of 25 cents a share on the 43,500,000 shares outstanding. For the nine months the balance was equal to $2.08 a common share as compared with $2.85 a share in that period last year, when the figures included non-recurring profit of $9,517,943, or the equivalent of 17 cents a share on the stock.

European Cartel Cuts Zinc Output

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The European zinc cartel has decided on an additional 5 per cent reduction in output, making the total curtailment 50 per cent.

Decline Reported In Gasoline Sales

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 24.—Total sales of gasoline by all oil companies in California in September amounted to 117,188,118 gallons against 119,557,140 gallons in August, the State Board of Equalization reports.

On this basis taxes collected by the state amounted to $3,480,487 in September, compared with $3,550,847 in August. For the first nine months of this year, receipts from the gasoline tax total $31,866,759, an increase of $2,154,089 over receipts for corresponding period 1930.

FASHION AIDS RIBBON MILL EARNINGS

Changing Vogue Brings Resumption of Activity After Five-Year Lull

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Century Ribbon Mills, Inc., since shortly before the end of the first half year has experienced an increase in its business through the use of ribbons in women's dresses and hats. For at least five years, ribbons were not used to any great extent in women's wear. Consequently, ribbon manufacturers suffered a marked cut in their volume of business, resulting eventually in the elimination of many of the manufacturers.

NINE MONTHS NET UP

Now, however, ribbons are being used widely, and sales and profits of the Century Ribbon Mills, Inc., have expanded substantially this year. For the first nine months of 1931, net profit after all charges and taxes will be approximately $135,000, equal after preferred dividends, or 73 cents a share on the common, comparing with $42,137 in the first nine months of 1930, equal to $3.34 a share on the preferred stock outstanding on September 30, 1930.

RETIRING STOCK

The change in styles this year came too late to give Century the benefit of the Easter trade. Normally, however, the ribbon business moves in cycles, and the present one should carry at least through 1932, if precedent affords any guide.

In addition to the operating profit for the first nine months of 1931, additions to surplus were increased by profits on the purchase of $123,000 par value of preferred stock subsequently retired. For the first nine months this year, these profits amounted to $35,148.

Europeans Reach Platinum Accord

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A world platinum accord has been announced here. The accord results from a new English company, Consolidated Platinums Ltd., having concluded contracts to buy and resell virtually all the new platinum production originating in Russia, Canada, South Africa and Colombia, constituting the major portion of the world's output of this precious metal.

Sale of platinum which the newly-formed company will buy will be through existing distributors and dealers; thus, there will be no change in present distribution methods.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

The demand for fruit and vegetables was slow today at the wholesale produce markets in Pittsburgh. There were no changes in quotations.

The poultry markets remained steady; demand fair, supply nominal, with slight changes in quotations.

The butter, egg and cheese markets ruled firm, demand good, supply adequate with slight changes in quotations.

Car lot supplies were moderate with 324 cars on track. Arrivals included 14 cars of apples, 7 cabbage, 2 cauliflowers, 3 celery, 33 grapes, 1 honeydews, 1 lettuce, 2 onions, 10 pineapples, 1 pears, 21 potatoes, 7 sweet potatoes, 1 watermelons and 3 mixed vegetables.

STOCK MARKET SOON TURNS HEAVY

Trading Sluggish; Price Changes Fractional With Steel, Can, P. R. R. Lower

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — (AP.) — The stock market was hesitant in the early dealings today.

The opening was irregularly higher, but a somewhat heavy tone soon developed. Price changes were mostly fractional. Trading was sluggish.

Losses of around ½ point appeared in United States Steel, American Can, and Pennsylvania Railroad by the end of the first half hour. Eastman, after rising nearly a point, reacted to show a loss of about as much. Corn products pushed up ¾, then lost its rise. Union Pacific opened a point higher, and Standard Oils of California and New Jersey were firm.

This was the second anniversary of the outbreak of panicky selling that swept away the bull market in the fall of 1929, and Wall street recalled that predictions of those who at that time were called alarmists by some die-hard bulls have since been fulfilled. The general position, however, is obviously much stronger than it was a year ago today when a vast amount of liquidating still remained to be accomplished.

President Farrell of United States Steel Corporation, speaking at the steel institute meeting last night, added a word of optimism to the more cheerful expressions previously voiced by other executives.

A White House statement said President Hoover and Premier Laval were only discussing "such policies as each of the two governments can develop to expedite recovery from the world economic depression."

Strength in foreign bonds this week is taken as an expression of hope that something constructive will come out of the Washington conversations, which are to continue over the week-end. Wheat's advances were most favorably commented on here.

Sterling opened unchanged at 3.91½.

WEIR PREDICTS STEEL GAIN

Based on the large number of small orders received by National Steel Corporation since October 1, E. T. Weir, chairman of the company, today stated it is his belief that the low point in the steel industry has passed. Sentiment is better and buyers are contracting into next year on some lines. He said:

"Our volume of orders over the past week has been very heavy, that is, in the number of specifications, the tonnage for each being small. This indicates, however, that inventories finally have reached rock-bottom and fabricators are under the necessity of taking in material to cover whatever business they are able to pick up themselves.

"Sentiment generally is better, and there is a willingness on the part of buyers to contract into next year for the lines on which the books have been opened for that advanced delivery. Wage reductions, which were made effective October 1, have been very well received by our men, and with the prospects of giving them increased work from now on, I think the labor situation can be said to be in excellent shape."

Montreal Flour Prices Advanced

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 24.—(AP.)—Spring wheat flour prices were advanced 10 cents a barrel here due to recent upturns in the wheat markets. First patents were quoted at $4.70, second patents at $3.90 and bakers' patents, or straights, at $3.80 per barrel, less 10 cents for cash.

WALL STREET HEARS

That General Electric's orders this month are above the company's expectations.

That several important professionals have been buyers of American and Foreign Power.

That Standard Oil of California is likely to maintain the dividend even if it is unearned.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

THRIFT OFFICIAL EXTOLS U. S. SOUNDNESS

Anderson Says Loan Firms Daily Receive Evidence Of Economic Firmness

Declaring in a talk before the Pennsylvania Association of Industrial Thrift Corporations that the thrift companies of Pennsylvania are getting daily evidence of the soundness of the general business and financial structure of America, C. N. Anderson, president of the Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation, pleaded for restoration of economic confidence existing. We must not give way to fear.

During the two years of the depression industrial loan companies have loaned millions to many thousands of Pittsburghers, according to Mr. Anderson. These companies report that payments on the loans are being kept up with remarkable regularity, indicating the health of business in general in this district, Mr. Anderson said.

U. S. WEALTHY

"It is very easy to have faith in your country when the sun of prosperity is riding high. The time when it is important to have faith is when the sky is overcast. In times of war when victory rode with the enemy, America did not lose faith. Why should we grow weak-kneed now?

"We have natural resources beyond the power of any mind to count—enough to maintain many times our present population in the very highest comfort. We are not dependent upon any other country for food, for clothing, for anything but a few trifling luxuries.

"We need not depend upon other peoples to buy what we produce. We have the people, and we have the wealth to buy our own products. In the best years of our foreign trade, our exports never amounted to more than approximately one-tenth of our production, and in most years it has been less. Our best market—almost our whole market—is and has always been our own people. Our 120,000,000 American brethren can buy and use enough to keep our fields and our mills and our stores humming with happy activity."

New President

WILLIAM J. WRIGHT

WRIGHT MADE AGENCY CHIEF

Announcement is made by Holgar J. Johnson, general agent of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, to the effect that William J. Wright has been elected to the position of president of the Holgar J. Johnson Agency Association.

The election was the result of balloting by the entire agency force of 130 men representing the company throughout Western Pennsylvania and a portion of West Virginia and Ohio.

Mr. Wright will represent the entire agency force in all agency management problems and was elected on the basis of his production value to the agency, friendliness in giving freely of help to the agency and members of the agency, his efficiency as underwriter and his general standing in his community.

Local Branch of Credit Corporation Formed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

ORGANIZATION OF THE NATIONAL Credit Corporation is proceeding rapidly. It is expected that actual operations to aid banks will be under way within a short time.

Pittsburgh has been one of the first cities to complete its local organization and to secure actual subscriptions from all member banks of the Clearing House Association. Application blanks have been forwarded to all other banks in the district. Banks must subscribe for debentures of the National Credit Corporation to the extent of 2 per cent of their deposits or 10 per cent of the capital and surplus before they will be eligible for assistance.

The local organization will be designated as No. 2 of the National Credit Corporation of the Fourth Federal Reserve District. It will have all banks served by the Pittsburgh branch of the Federal Reserve Bank under its jurisdiction. Cleveland will be known as No. 1 and Cincinnati as No. 3.

Loan Committee Named

OPERATIONS OF THE LOCAL association, which has subscribed $11,500,000 to the bank pool, will be supervised by an executive committee. Members of this body are Sidney S. Liggett, vice president of the Union Trust Company; John S. Smith, vice president of the Farmers Deposit National Bank; Frank E. Brooks, president of the First National Bank; Lawrence N. Murray, vice president of the Mellon National Bank, and Lloyd W. Smith, president of the Union National Bank.

Pittsburgh is represented on the board of directors of the National Credit Corporation by A. E. Braun, president of the Farmers Deposit National Bank.

The local executive committee will pass upon all loans to be made to banks in this district by the National Credit Corporation.

To Aid Banks

BANKS WILL BE GIVEN a fourth line of defense to meet exceptional drains of deposits. At present their first line is their reserve fund of cash. Their second line consists of commercial paper and United States government bonds on which they can borrow at the Federal Reserve Banks. Their third line consists of bonds on which they can usually borrow money at other banks or can sell in the open market.

The new organization will make it possible to realize cash on a fourth class of investments. These usually are perfectly sound but banks cannot readily convert them into cash at a time of stress. The exact requirements of the National Credit Corporation have not been made public but it is believed that they will be sufficiently broad to make a major share of bank assets immediately liquid providing their future value is sufficiently assured.

Nationwide Pool

SINGLE COMMUNITIES WILL NOT be dependent only on the resources raised by subscription of local banks. The National Credit Corporation is nation-wide in its operations and can make funds in districts which are not under stress immediately available in cities where lack of public confidence has caused heavy withdrawals of deposits.

It is generally believed that the organization will adequately protect all banks which are likely to suffer from whispering campaigns.

INGOT OUTPUT AT 26% FOR WEEK

Substantial Improvement In Steel Expected When Banking Status Clears

By B. E. V. LUTY

The steel making trade is taking less interest than usual in the current flow of orders and regards the banking situation as by far the most important factor in the sum total of business conditions. Steel orders are so small and so variegated that they give little hint as to the circumstances and prospects of individual consuming lines. The belief is that substantial improvement in steel will come when banking matters are righted, there being meanwhile only minor fluctuations.

For four weeks steel ingot production was at about 28 per cent of capacity, decreasing last week to about 27 per cent and this week to not over 26 per cent. In two weeks the Chicago district has lost fully five points, being now at not over 25 per cent, while the Youngstown district has slipped still more. In contrast, the Pitsburgh district has maintained a rate of fully 25 per cent since its decline early in September, and indeed production has been up just a trifle in the last week or 10 days.

PRICES HOLD FIRM

Finished steel prices continue to hold firmly all along the line, with the trifling exception of a little weakness having developed in cold rolled strips in connection with buying by the automobile industry. In general sellers are influenced to maintain a firm position by the fact that cuts would simply increase losses and would become known promptly, reacting on the cutter by a lower market developing.

Automobile makers are unusually secretive as to their plans for new models as to both character and time of manufacture. There will be increasing production after this month, but how much is problematical since some new models may be deferred for the New York show in January. A fair tonnage of steel has been bought but thus far little has been released for actual production and shipment. This month's automobile production is estimated at only 110,000 to 125,000, which would put the month just under December, 1929, and make it the smallest since January, 1922.

TIN PLATE GAINS

This week the leading interest began making tin plate on advanced specifications from its largest customer against next year's requirements, and later on there will be similar action by other makers, promising an upturn in tin plate production.

The farm implement industry has further increased its steel buying and seems to be aiming at a 30 per cent operating rate for the time being, after a rate for months of only 15 to 20 per cent.

St. Paul System' Loadings Higher

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—During the week ended October 12, the St. Paul Railroad handled 30,845 revenue cars, compared to 30,359 in the week preceding and 36,884 in the like week of 1930.

During the week ended October 21 Chicago and Northwestern Railway handled 29,461 revenue cars against 28,455 in the preceding week and 35,037 in the same week last year.

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS LOWER

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—All the questions requiring large-scale constructive action to speed recovery remain in a state of suspension this week, says the Business Week, in its summary covering the week ending today. Emergency remedies applied to the banking situation and offered to the railroads in the rate decision, as well as provisional arrangements which have improved the European political and financial picture, have temporarily relieved the tension and put the patient in a more comfortable position pending further consultation by the doctors on the advisability of more drastic operations.

Most encouraging among the reactions to developments of recent weeks is the strengthening of key commodities, probably in anticipation of ultimate inflation as the only exit from our economic dilemma. Slight symptoms of scattered business improvement have appeared in some localities and special lines, but these are not yet reflected in the figures. The business index has relapsed to a lower level, but still holds above the deadline of 70 per cent of normal that seems to have established the limit of business decline in this depression. The index reading is 70.2 for the week ending October 17, as against 84.8 for the same week in 1930.

GRAIN 'SHORTS' MEET TOPIC

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Except in certain quarters here, the feeling among administration officials is that short selling on the grain markets has not been serious in its effect on price declines.

Several days ago Silas H. Strawn, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and counsel for the Chicago Board of Trade, called at the White House. Not long afterward the information came from Chicago that a committee of the board of directors would call upon the President and the Secretary of Agriculture to learn what they would like to have the exchange do in relation to short selling.

Those who have followed closely the trading on the Chicago Board of Trade in the last few months hold that there is no necessity for taking any steps to curb the short interest. It is believed that the forthcoming conference will result in a comprehension among administration officials of the unimportance in price declines of short interests, and consequently of the lack of necessity for taking any steps to protect the market other than the diligence already exercised by the exchange and the Government's supervising agencies.

This meeting of Board of Trade officials with Mr. Hoover and Mr. Hyde, however, will not take place for some time.

Schulte's Offer Gets Approval

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The offer of David A. Schulte for the assets of Schulte-United, Inc., Millers, Inc., and Schulte-United 5c to $1 Stores, Inc., has been approved by Referee Harold P. Coffin. The offer has already been accepted by creditors.

RETAIL TRADE IMPROVED

Cooler weather this week has stimulated the movement of fall merchandise to some extent and retail trade is more active than for some time past, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review.

Demand for men's and women's wearing apparel at wholesale has shown greater activity and there has been a freer distribution of blankets, underwear, etc. Sale of shoes are not heavy, with demand principally for lower priced merchandise.

Manufacturers of electrical equipment report operations on a satisfactory basis while movement of radiators and sanitary equipment continues much below normal.

Production of bituminous coal continues about 15 per cent below the average for last fall and demand shows little change, although demand for heating grades is somewhat stronger.

Collections are reported as generally slow at both wholesale and retail.

RESERVE RATE RAISED HERE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The Federal Reserve Board announced that the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland has increased its rediscount rate from 3 to 3½ per cent effective today.

The Cleveland Reserve district includes Pittsburgh.

CHANGE IN GAME SUITS MAX'S STYLE

THE APPOINTMENT OF Max Carey to take the place of the unseated Wilbert Robinson as manager of the Brooklyn baseball club is of particular interest to Pittsburgh fans because of Carey's long connection with the Pirates. In 16 years as a player and one season as a coach, Max built up a large personal following in this district, and a host of friends hereabouts will be pulling hard for his success, insofar, of course, as that success does not interfere with the progress of the Buccaneers. As Treasurer W. E. Benswanger, of the local club, observed, "We wish Carey all the luck in the world, but we hope we win 22 games from him next year."

Max Carey

Carey's chances for succeeding as a pilot probably are much better at this time than they would have been if he had taken over a managership prior to last season. This for the reason that the less lively ball introduced in 1931 has brought about to some extent the return of the kind of game which Max knows best, the kind in which he specialized, and which made him a great player.

THAT IS THE type of game that calls for more speed, more base stealing, more bunting and more playing for one run. Low scores are again the order, and the style of play best adapted to such conditions has always been the former Pirate star's forte. He surely appears better qualified to handle a team successfully under that system than he would have been in the days of the rabbit ball, when straight slugging and big scores were the rule.

For that reason, too, the Brooklyn owners have made a happy selection in picking Carey. He fits into their needs in a more ideal way than any other man who could have been picked up. For the one thing which the Brooklyn club chiefly lacks is the one thing which Max is best qualified to teach. The Flatbush outfit has been the poorest team in either major league in baserunning, and Carey ought to be able to remedy that defect in better fashion than the average skipper.

AT THAT THE job which Carey is undertaking is no easy one, as Brooklyn has been distinctly a power club, one that relied mainly on the force of its punch to win games. To shift it over to the opposite style, and change the lineup to suit, may prove to be a problem requiring considerable time.

But after all, the main requisite of a successful manager is ability to handle about 25 men of varying dispositions, and, though Carey is well fitted for his new job otherwise, what he shows in that respect, in directing a club on which discipline has been none too strict, is the item that probably will determine his success or failure.

BASEBALL FOLLOWERS EVERYWHERE are sorry to see old Robbie pass out. He has spent 51 of his 68 years in the game, and as a player, coach and scout he has always helped the sport by his personality and color. Starting in 1914, his term as Brooklyn manager dated back farther than that of any other present pilot in the big show excepting only Connie Mack and John McGraw. And with Robbie passes also the Brooklyn club's nickname of Robins. It was from Robinson's own name that that title was derived, and it won't fit the club under any other manager. It will be necessary to go back to the Dodgers or coin a new nickname for the troupe.*

Frank Carideo

WHEN PITT PLAYED Notre Dame last year one of the thorns in the Panther side was Frank Carideo. Today the Sutherlands escaped having to reckon with the all-America quarterback, but Carnegie Tech was not so fortunate, as he bobbed up here in another role as assistant to Nobel Kizer on the Purdue Coaching staff.

Football men generally look for Carideo, ranked among the brainiest field generals of all time, to be one of the outstanding coaches of the future, whether he eventually goes back to Notre Dame or takes charge at another college. Incidentally, the name of Carideo will not fade out at Notre Dame immediately, as Frank's younger brother, Angelo, entered the South Bend university this fall and is now playing on the Irish freshman team.

THE WRESTING OF the world welterweight championship from Young Jack Thompson by Lou Brouillard through a decision in 15 rounds at Boston last night was no great surprise. Brouillard had already defeated Thompson in a non-title bout and last night's match had looked like a dangerous one for the Negro titleholder from the outset.

In fact, the readiness with which Thompson took such a risk with his crown caused many fans to suspect that somebody behind him might turn out later to have purchased an interest in Brouillard. Welter champs don't last long nowadays. Since July of 1929 the title has been held by Joe Dundee, Jackie Fields, Thompson, Tommy Freeman, then Thompson again, and now Brouillard.

THE SPLENDID KICKING of Sylvio Zananelli stood out like a lighthouse in the fog last night, and for the second time in succession was a huge factor in enabling the Dukes to hold a strong foe to a scoreless tie. In driving the visitors back time after time by his long boots he did much to set at naught the superior rushing of Western Maryland.*

THE OTHER DUKE players also put up a fine defensive game in the pinches, as witness the stopping of Dick Harlow's forces twice near the Red and Blue goal line, but the need for an improved offensive was again strongly in evidence.

While it was a creditable showing to hold such teams as Georgetown and Western Maryland to scoreless deadlocks, the Dukes will have to develop a better attack before they can hope for many victories. They have not scored a point in their last three games and have made only 25 in six contests for the season to date.

IF THE BAN of the New York Boxing Commission on stepladder fights had been in force generally in the past, Jack Dempsey never would have been given a chance to wrest the heavyweight title from Jess Willard, Joe Walcott would not have beaten Joe Choynski, Tommy Loughran would not have trimmed Victorio Campolo, and Mickey Walker would not have included in his record a draw with Jack Sharkey.

William Muldoon

But the New York solons do not always stick to their rulings. On the same grounds they once turned down a Campolo-Risko match, but after it had been shifted to Miami and proved the feature of the program they approved a return meeting of those fighters in New York.

"WE DON'T WANT any more matches like that between Sharkey and Walker," said Commissioner William Muldoon in explaining the opposition to the Carnera-Paulino bout and the ban on like affairs for the future. "Carnera should fight nearer his own size, such as Campolo or DeKuh. Paulino would do better fighting a man of his own build, like Walker. If Walker wants to fight heavyweights, let him box men of his own type. The fighters must be at least approximately well matched physically. Then, if one can win by showing more skill or brains, all right. And we don't want any more Benny Leonard comebacks, either. That sort of thing must stop."*

TARTANS SET FOR STRUGGLE, AT STADIUM

engagements to follow. As a matter of fact, this game is the first one in Tech's history against a Western Conference team, and Tech for almost 20 years has been coached by Judge Walter P. Steffen, an oldtime Conference star at Chicago.

Tech makes no claims to having a great team this year, what with a small squad and a lot of sophomores in the regular lineup, but it is proud of the dash and fight of its representatives, knowing they will be in any ball game right up to their necks all of the way.

Purdue, which worked out at the Stadium yesterday afternoon, has been hard hit in the way of injuries, and may not be at its full strength. The Boilermakers started out with three complete swell sets of backs, and, if Coaches Noble Kizer, Frank Carideo and Mal Elward are to be taken at their word, they now have difficulty scraping up a quorum to start a game behind the line. Under the conditions, both teams likely will have to open up with the best stuff at their command and a lot of thrilling forward passing may be the order of the afternoon.

FULLBACK UNDECIDED

Carnegie's lineup is set except for the fullback post, where it has not yet been decided whether Jerry O'Toole or Bert Pouncey will start. For Purdue Westerman and Voinoff are supplanting Letzinger and Janecek, the regular guards, and Merz fills in for the veteran Paul Calvert at right end, as the result of his fine work against Wisconsin last Saturday. In the backfield, Ed Risk, all-Conference halfback, will not be able to start, Fred Hecker, a sensational sophomore passer and runner, answering the rollcall in his place, while the greatest loss will be at quarterback, where Jack White, veteran field general, will be missing because of a lee injury. Paul Pardonner will fill this breach. Ookie Miller, center, is captain of the visitors, and Paul Moss, end, is touted as a wizard at catching forward passes.

Purdue lost to Wisconsin last Saturday, 21-14, as a result of a hectic opening 10 minutes during which a blocked kick and a fumble contributed 14 points to the opposition's total.

Prior to that, the Boilermakers had beaten Coe, 19-0; Western Reserve, 28-0, and Illinois, 7-0. Remaining games on the schedule are with Chicago, Centenary, Iowa and Indiana.

BOXERS FINISH GRIND TODAY

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, and Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, welterweight rivals, who meet in the windup at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, finish up the hard part of their training today, and the managers of both declare they have come through the grind in tiptop shape for a couple of fellows who have just had bad right hands.

The Garden management reports brisk interest in the battle and looks for its best gate of the season so far. Meanwhile Matchmaker Jules Beck is working on a double windup card for one week from Monday, with Sammy Dorfman, of New York, meeting Ray Collins, of Erie, and Mose Butch, local bantamweight, opposing Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland, in the two 10-rounders.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, has signed a double windup for his show next week, which will be held on Wednesday instead of Thursday. He has Battling Gizzy Donora lightweight, against Harry Forbes, of Indianapolis, in the top bout, and Jimmy Thomas, Gizzy's stablemate, against Eddie Pucci, of Ohio, in the other 10-rounder.

Carver to Be Heard On Air at Irish Tilt

Jess Carver, football writer of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be heard on the air between halves of the Pitt-Notre Dame game at South Bend, Ind., today, which will be broadcast by Pat Flanagan through Station WJAS and relayed to the spectators at the Carnegie Tech-Purdue game at the Stadium here. The program will go on at 2:45 o'clock.

KDKA will broadcast the Ohio State - Northwestern game at Columbus, O., beginning at 1:45. This station also has arranged to have Bill Farren describe the Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame game at the Stadium next Saturday.

JACK THOMPSON DROPS CROWN

BOSTON, Oct. 24.—(AP.)—Lou Brouillard, 20-year-old southpaw battler from Worcester, gained the welterweight championship by giving Champion Young Jack Thompson such a terrific battering that the officials turned in a unanimous decision at the Boston Garden, last night.

Thompson appeared burned out. Brouillard had a decisive edge in 12 of the 15 rounds and his heavy, but not always accurate left hooks dropped the defending titlist twice, in the tenth with a series of heavy lefts to the jaw, and three rounds later with sizzling portside hooks to the Negro's thin body.

Brouillard, the aggressor in every round, piled up a wide lead early. His left was seldom idle and he caused his opponent such distress with this weapon that Thompson tried to convince Referee Johnny Brassil he was fouled when Lou banged over a terrific left that barely landed in fair territory late in the sixth session.

The defeated champion and his handlers devoted most of the next rest period emphasizing their protests, but they were ignored by the official, who ordered the battlers to resume action when the bell sounded for the seventh.

Thompson was over-cautious during most of the battle. He allowed Brouillard to close in almost at will and pound his body or rip hard lefts to his head.

CAREY NAMED ROBIN PILOT

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(AP.)—The factional war that has been raging within the councils of the Brooklyn National League team for six years culminated in the removal of Wilbert Robinson, one of baseball's colorful old guards, as manager, and the appointment of Max Carey as his successor.

The removal of Robbie was by unanimous vote of the five directors. Carey was given a one-year contract. Uncle Robbie was given a cash gift of $10,000 with his release.

Robinson, next to the last of big league survivors of the famous old Baltimore Orioles of 1895-96-97 that numbered John McGraw, Willie Keeler, and Hughie Jennings, became manager of the Robins 17 years ago.

MIGHT SUCCEED ENS

There was a possibility he might land the managerial post with the Pittsburgh Pirates left vacant by the release of Jewel Ens or that he might continue in baseball as a scout.

Max Carey is 41. For 10 years, with Pittsburgh, Max was one of the National League's outstanding outfielders and base stealers, reaching his peak in 1916 when he stole 63 bases. He broke into gridiron holdings this fall, and has become a great triple threat back.

Today's game is being fought for Knute Rockne, who met such a tragic death in an air crash last March. Always tough to beat, doubly so on their own field, they have been conquered only once in a decade. Imagine how much more formidable will be the Irish cohorts today as they go to battle with the determination to risk all and give all for the departed, peerless Rock.

Seldom have I seen such a spirit of out-and-out optimism over the outcome of a football game between more or less evenly matched elevens as exists here. Such an attitude, of course, will help Pitt, especially if it is allowed to seep into the minds of the players. And really it can hardly help but do so. The folks cannot forget the ease with which Notre Dame crushed the Panthers in Pittsburgh last year, and the habit of winning has taken such a firm grip on South Benders and followers of Notre Dame that it is well nigh mentally impossible for them to even dream of defeat.

SET FOR STRUGGLE

Of course, Jock Sutherland's Panther warriors are going to have something to say about all this. Pitt will be outweighed and will be fighting on foreign soil and before a hostile crowd, but the team that went through a serious, determined drill yesterday here in the Stadium, and that has worked for this game from the very inception of the season, is not going to give up today without a struggle. The Panthers, in good physical trim, and better still, in almost perfect mental condition, should be powerful and resourceful enough to afford Notre Dame's legions a very toughest sort of an afternoon.

Notre Dame's losses from last year's undefeated eleven were heavy, but apparently Coach Hunk Anderson has been fortunate in the caliber of his sophomores and in the matter of leftovers from the varsity squad. True, Brill, Carideo, Metzger, Savoldi, Mullins, and O'Connor are gone, but what about Sheketski, Cronin, Melinkovich, Murphy, Jaskwich, Koken, Bryan and Krause and Greeny? These babies can play a pretty mean game of football if they wish, and so far, they have not given any indication of not wanting to do just that very thing.

IRISH CONFIDENT

In its four games, Pitt has scored a total of 147 points, in three, Notre Dame has piled up 88. The team did not score against Northwestern, which means that the 88 points were registered in two games, against Indiana and Drake.

It was just about a year ago that Notre Dame met the challenge of another unbeaten Pitts-

PANTHERS PLAY LION CUBS

Freshman college games involving district teams are features of today's football card.

The Pitt yearlings play the Penn State first-year team at State College, Pa., while the Carnegie Tech plebes tangle with West Virginia University at Morgantown, W. Va.

The W. & J. varsity eleven plays an old rival in Lafayette College at Easton, Pa., while Penn State also encounters an ancient foe in Syracuse at Syracuse.

Among other varsity games for tri-state district teams today are: Westminster vs. Juniata at New Wilmington, Pa.; Thiel vs. Bethany at Greenville, Pa.; Allegheny vs. Adrian at Meadville, Pa.; Waynesburg vs. New River at Waynesburg, Pa.; California Teachers vs. Bloomsburg Teachers at Bloomsburg, Pa.; Slippery Rock Teachers vs. Clarion Teachers at Clarion, Pa. West Virginia Wesleyan vs. Glenville at Buckhannon, W. Va.; Marshall vs. Marietta at Huntington, W. Va.

Carver — Jess Carver, crack football writer of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will report today's important Pitt vs. Notre Dame battle at South Bend for tomorrow's Sunday issue. Read his colorful narrative of the struggle of the two unbeaten teams to survive.

Harpster — Howard Harpster, Geneva College coach and former all-America quarterback at Carnegie Tech, whose success as a player against Notre Dame was almost uncanny, and Heartley (Hunk) Anderson, Knute Rockne's successor as head coach of the Irish, will review the battle in Monday's issue. Harpster also reported the Notre Dame-Northwestern scoreless tie earlier in the season and was the only writer on the scene to call attention to the fact that Notre Dame could have scored a touchdown on a blocked punt, demonstrating once again his keen powers of perception when it comes to football. DUKES' FIGHT HOLDS W. MARYLAND TO TIE

Wilkinsburg Risks Title Chances in Battle With Tarentum Today

LOCAL TEAM OUTPLAYED IN FOG

Two football teams, the Dukes of Duquesne University and the Green Terrors of Western Maryland College, were lost in the fog before a crowd of 10,000 at Forbes Field last night. No complaints wrong. Neither team did. They simply were lost and it showed in a scoreless tie, the Dukes second in a row. On the preceding Friday night a well fed desert opened a scoreless tie with Georgetown. Last night such a heavy fog blanketed the field that you might have been able to cut it with a meat cleaver but hardly with anything less.

For all we know, they still may have searching parties out looking for the elves and the safety men who were hardly known till as the brain mist gradually enveloped the scene.

DUKES GET BREAK

Our Dukes may have been in tighter spots and yet not lost in the past, but they had to work almost a miracle to escape defeat last night. They never really threatened and were constantly in hot water. Only a strong goal line defense and some powerful kicking by the husky Zaninelli saved the fog-bound night for the home team in the face of a fast-charging Green Terror line and fast-starting backs who were jumping into action out of a snappy shift.

The statistics at the finish showed that Western Maryland, which is coached by Dick Harlow, had registered 16 first downs against the Dukes seven and had gained 205 yards net against 126 and completed six out of 11 forward passes for 84 yards against only four out of 20 by the Dukes for a gain of 48 yards. The fact that the Dukes averaged 41 5-12 yards per punt in 12 tries against 37 3-10 yards in 10 efforts for the visitors staved off the latter in several tense situations. Zaninelli got off one punt that traveled only 15 yards before it went out of bounds and this brought down his average for his good kicks.

IN TROUBLE AT START

The Dukes were in trouble right at the start when after they had punted following Western Maryland's kickoff, Halfback Doughty, who with Fullback Dunn shared the offensive honors of the game, tossed a long forward pass to Halfback McNally who almost got away for a touchdown, being dragged down on the 13-yard line. The Dukes fought off a charge and took the ball on downs on the six and had to intercept a pass on the 25 to halt another march and found the Terrors coming on again until they lost the ball on a batted pass that fell into Duquesne arms on the Western Maryland 48-yard line and then were backed up as the visitors kicked out of bounds on the 10-yard line as the quarter ended.

Starting the second period the Dukes punted and Western Maryland worked back to the local 38-yard line and then kicked out on the 18. On an exchange of punts they kicked out on the eight and on another exchange they booted over the goal. Just before the half ended the Dukes put on their first smash when Devinney ran 16 yards on a fake pass play and a forward pass carried the ball to the Western Maryland 33-yard line, after which Western Maryland intercepted another pass and kicked out of danger.

Western Maryland got a break at the start of the third period when Zaninelli's lone poor punt went out of bounds on the Western Maryland 46-yard line. Working back to the Dukes 45 the Terrors kicked out on the 22.

BROWN FUMBLES PUNT

When Duquesne punted back the Terrors decided to try for a break and booted on first down the ball bounding over the goal. The break followed for the opposing team when as Duquesne again kicked, Brown lost the ball in the fog and fumbled it. Duquesne recovering on the Western Maryland 27-yard line. Western Maryland held and took the ball on downs on its 23 as a pass to the goal line failed and another on final down made only three yards. The period ended after the visitors had returned to the Dukes 47-yard line.

The first play of the fourth quarter was an 18-yard run by Dunn on an effective double pass from Doughty which often succeeded for a good gain. Following this first down, the Terrors just missed another one on the 20, losing the ball. The Dukes made first down on the 31 and were given a 15-yard advance and another first down when Zaninelli was roughed on a kick. A 22-yard pass by DeLuca to Devinney followed and it was first down on the Western Maryland 32-yard line, the Dukes' best advance of the game. On third down, with eight yards to go, Zaninelli kicked out of bounds on the 11-yard line.

An exchange of punts gave the Terrors the ball on their own 20-yard line, and from here they marched up the field to lose it on downs on the four-yard line when a pass to the goal line failed as the game ended. A 24-yard run by Dunn and a pass of the same distance that was allowed because of interference with the receiver featured this 56-yard drive.

Statistically, Western Maryland won this football game, but actually both teams were lost in the fog, and they may be there yet for all we know.—HARRY KECK.

burgh eleven. Carnegie Tech and Notre Dame took the sticks right here in South Bend. A week later the Ramblers met still another unbeaten eleven, Pitt, and there really isn't any sense or charts in bringing up the memory of that game, is it? Now today Notre Dame hopes to drive a step further toward another perfect season by ripping through another Pitt team. And the oracles are about unanimous in admitting that the outlook for such a triumph is bright.

Starting lineups were announced by the rival coaches after yesterday's workouts. Pitt came to town early from its retreat in Niles, Michigan, and preceded the Irish in the stadium. The Ramblers followed later in the afternoon, neither workout was strenuous, the time being devoted to kicking and passing and signal drills.

NO LINEUP CHANGE

Coach Sutherland will start the same eleven that has gone to bat in both the major games to date with Johnny Lush in at fullback and Jimmy Clark roosting on the bench. Capt. Eddie Hirshberg and Rip Collins are to be at the ends, Big Jim MacMurdo and Jess Quatse, upon whom the burden of the Pitt line defense rests, will be at the tackles. Much depends on how these fellows go today. It has been said by the learned of football that it takes two big, fast-charging tackles to mess up Notre Dame offenses, and the learned ought to know. Quatse and MacMurdo are big enough and can charge hard enough to cause trouble, if only they are on.

Hart Morris and Mike Milligan will be in there at the guards, lessened to a long and arduous afternoon. Ralph Daugherty will be over the ball at center.

The game will get under way at 3 o'clock Pittsburgh time.

ST. VINCENT'S COPS

LATROBE, Pa., Oct. 24.—St. Vincent College trampled an invading Salem eleven of West Virginia, for a 38-0 decision here yesterday. The day's star was the lank halfback, Johnson, who turned in the most spectacular showing of years for the locals to score 32 points.

Snatching passes out of the air the speedy star tore through the Salem team time after time to register tallies. The most spectacular run was a twisting open field dash of 85 yards after taking a pass from Purin. Passing, running or kicking Johnson stood head and shoulders above both teams. The lineup:

St. Vincent		Salem
Carney	L E	Hogue
Dubley	L T	C. Rorp
Lynch	L G	Rorp
Paul	C	Summers
Hoffer	R G	Meader
Westfall	R T	Bond

2,166 TO WORK ON EMERGENCY JOBS HERE

Association's Fall Campaign Opening Nov. 2; Relief Fund Drive to Pay Wages

Seven construction and improvement projects will be started November 2, opening the 1931-32 work program of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, Frank R. Phillips, chairman of the operating committee, announced today. The projects will give employment to 2,166 men on an alternate week basis, he said.

City Council will pay for the materials, supervision and skilled labor he said, and wages will be paid from contributions to the Joint campaign of the Welfare and Emergency Fund November 9 to 23.

START WORK NOV. 15

November 15, 1,230 men will be put to work on construction jobs in the county outside Pittsburgh, and 682 men and 67 women will start work on improvement projects at hospitals and charitable institutions, Phillips said.

He emphasized the first jobs will be given those whose applications are already on file and whose need for immediate employment has been definitely established.

Five new members were added to the corporation committee, Phillips announced yesterday. They are F. R. Dravo, T. A. Dunn, W. L. Monro, C. K. Robinson and H. B. Kirkpatrick.

CLUB COUNCIL AIDS

Full co-operation was pledged by the Inter-Club Council yesterday. Members voted to use Welfare Fund stickers on automobiles during the drive, to aid the speakers' bureau and to issue cards to men asking for aid on the streets, enabling the latter to obtain meals at some charitable agency, having the amount charged to the member giving the card.

A mass meeting is planned for co-operation in the campaign by the citizens of Springdale, Cheswick and Harwick. It will be held in the Springdale Chamber of Commerce rooms, C. W. Head will preside.

TAX RELIEF PLEA OF LAWRENCE

David L. Lawrence, Democratic nominee for County Commissioner, advocated adoption by the county of the graded tax law now in vogue in Pittsburgh, in an address yesterday at the noon meeting of the Henry George Club in the Chamber of Commerce Building. He said:

"If prompt legislation can be enacted, a substantial measure of tax relief can be granted to the home owners of the county living outside Pittsburgh. The farmer also would be a beneficiary because in almost every instance the value of farm buildings exceeds that of the acreage."

Offer of Marriage Throws Open Doors of Plenty And Fulfillment

CHAPTER III

Landers took Mary home in the kind of limousine that represented all her dreams of luxury; lengthy and lustrous, its engine purred like a kitten. The chauffeur was smartly military. After dinner she had declined an invitation to dance. But the proposal of marriage from Landers had rather upset the casual tempo of the evening. She had not replied to his offer. It was evident he expected no immediate answer and their conversation veered away from the topic. Both of them knew that enough, for one evening, had been said.

The car stopped before Mary's rooming house and Landers accompanied her to the door. She gave him her hand briefly in parting.

"Am I going to see you any more?" he asked almost indifferent.

"Why not?"

"I'll leave it to you," he returned. "Think it over and we'll have another talk whenever you like. There's no particular hurry. If you haven't your answer ready we can go to dinner and I'll try to show you a reasonably good time."

"Thank you so much," she said and disappeared into the the house.

Synopsis

Mary Kennedy has youth and beauty and an intense fear of poverty. Almost the last words of her dying mother warned her against marriage to a poor man. Mary refuses the offer of a home with her married sister, Katherine. She rents a small room. While sitting in the park making plans for a job, an elderly man of distinguished appearance engages her in conversation. He is Buck Landers, well-known sports promoter and race horse owner. He offers Mary a job. Mary calls on Landers relative to the position. He tells her she is to have dinner with him that night. Admitting he likes her, and suggesting marriage, Landers offers Mary a life of luxury.

Now Go On

STARTS NEW JOB

In her narrow room with its white iron bed looking into a courtyard she thought of the ornate and expensive roof garden she had just left. The evening gleamed brightly in retrospect. Actually it had been her first taste of the great city's magnificance, of its iridescent atmosphere. When she stretched her slender young body out on the rented bed she was not sleepy. It was pleasant to be there and give herself up to dreams and possibilities.

"But I'm not thinking about him at all—only his money," she told herself with a little jolt of honesty. "It would be nice to be his daughter. I can't imagine myself married to him . . . his wife."

Morning brought the crass necessity of the work-a-day world. Mr. Nelson, the manager of the Metropolis Hotel, received his new secretary with a marked cordiality.

"We're glad to have you with us, Miss Kennedy. Mr. Landers said some complimentary things about you. I think you're going to make good."

Nelson belonged to the Falstaff school of architecture. His girth was enormous, his face and head were round, and he wore a perpetual and professional smile. He had small bluish eyes, cunning and calculating. To a welcomed guest he could be the soul of hospitality, but to a cringing underling he was a Roman galley master.

Mary's work was in part stenographic. In reality she was something of an assistant manager. Nelson was constantly giving lists of articles to be ordered from the wholesale houses—foods, linens, sundries. She conferred daily with the housekeeper about chambermaids and laundry. Every department of the hotel made daily reports which she checked with the bookkeeper to forestall any leaks.

MEETS MOVIE ACTOR

"We're using 2% per cent more soap this year than last," Nelson said to her. "I want you to make a check-up with the storekeeper and find out what's becoming of it."

It developed that no more soap was used than formerly. It was only that the tradesman charged more and billed the hotel boldly for the increase. Long and earnestly Nelson talked into the telephone, and when he had finished the dealer had come back to his original price and agreed to a rebate on the excess charges. Five hundred dollars was thus returned to the Metropolis.

"Never let 'em get away with anything," Nelson told Mary. "That's the whole business!"

The patrons of the Metropolis were mainly of the sporting class. On the mezzanine floor adjoining Nelson's office there were several other offices occupied by boxing managers, hockey promoters and dubious gentlemen who wore striped shirts and diamond rings. Among the guests was Aubrey Hollingsworth, the movie actor. Mary had often seen him in the pictures. In recent years his popularity was beginning to wane but he was still more or less famous. She recalled recent newspaper writings that his wife was in Paris divorcing him. By an odd chance Mary, after a few days, was privileged to meet the celebrity.

"Hollingsworth wants to dictate a few letters, and our public stenographer is all tied up," Nelson said to her. "With guests like Hollingsworth we try to give every service—they bring a lot of publicity to the house. Would you mind going up to his office a half hour or so—for courtesy of the management and that sort of thing—know what I mean?"

GETS COMPLIMENT

Taking her notebook and pencil, a little nervously, Mary presented herself for service in Hollingsworth's suite. The great man received her in a scarlet and gold lounging robe, and a Byronic shirt.

"So sorry to put you out," he murmured in a rich throaty voice. "I usually bring my staff East with me, but this time I just packed off incognito, so to speak. Just make yourself comfortable anywhere about the room, my dear."

He gave her four or five letters to people in Los Angeles concerning small business matters. When he had finished Mary rose to go but he raised a graceful hand and detained her.

"It just occurred to me, my child, that you have a remarkable profile," he murmured. "The screen always needs new faces. I should be the last one to give false encouragement to aspirants, but may I ask, have you ever thought of going to Hollywood?"

"No, I haven't."

"I shouldn't dare make any definite promises, but if you ever come to the West Coast be sure to ring me up. I won't be going back for 10 days or so. Perhaps some evening here we may talk it over. I mean how would you like to come up here some evening and have a little talk with me about the movies, heart to heart, so to speak?"

PUGILIST VISITS

Before Mary could answer him, his telephone rang. "Oh, Juanita, darling! Just a minute, please." He put his hand over the mouthpiece and turned to Mary. "I think that will be all for today," he uttered, his eyes taking in Mary from head to feet. "You won't forget to ring me up, will you?"

Mary smiled but did not promise. She met other people whose names appeared quite often in the newspapers. Moe Levy, a hatchet-faced like man who was the manager of Dick Leeds, the "London Lad." Levy brought his protege into Nelson's office one day for a chat. Leeds was a fresh-faced young Cockney with broad shoulders and one thickened ear. He had come to America only recently and in the next few days was to make his bid for the heavyweight championship in an introductory bout at the Madison Square Garden. Nelson seemed to have a close friendship with the manager and admiring curiosity toward the fighter. All three of them chatted in pugilistic jargon that was not plain to Mary. It seemed they all agreed the "London Lad" was going to rock somebody called the Bounhk to sleep early in the proposed fight.

"Did you know that Mr. Landers owns Dick Leeds?" Nelson asked Mary after the other two had left. Levy is only a dummy manager. Mr Landers holds an option on the 'London Lad's' contract. You're mighty lucky to have Mr. Landers as a friend. He's the real fo, on all these sporting rackets. And the money he's got in the bank—oh, baby! A nice man to do business with, too. Hard boiled but a quick clicker."

INVITED TO FIGHTS

Landers after a week had passed without seeing her, telephoned her to come up to his apartment.

"How would you like to have dinner with me tonight?"

She hesitated a moment. Then, "Why not? I think it would be nice."

"You haven't made up your mind to give me a quick yes on the other proposition—the personal one?"

"I'm afraid it's not such a good idea," she said slowly.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," he said quickly, decisive. "There's no percentage in these long waits. We'll have dinner together and go and see the fights at the Garden tonight. I didn't get a chance to give you all of my argument the other night. Let me have another shot of convincing you. That's only fair, isn't it? Anybody, even Buck Landers, is entitled to his full chance, isn't he?"

"All right. I'll give you your chance," she said, a queer little throb in her voice.

Twenty thousand fight fans, screaming their half-hysterical blood lust, filled Madison Square Garden from pit to the distant girdered roof. Mary, beside Buck Landers, sat confused with the electric excitement in the first row.

The lights dimmed slowly until only the two heaving, bare-bodied fighters and the referee were visible in the white glare of the powerful lamps directly down on the ring.

Because she had met Dick Leeds, the "London Lad," she became a prey to anguish lest he be battered down. An intoxication of partisanship swept her face with fear and pain and hope, and when Leeds finally hammered his foe into insensibility she was clinging to the arm of Buck Landers, shaking with excitement, trying to cheer with her parched throat.

Then suddenly it was all over and she was milling with thousands for the exits as normality ebbed back into her consciousness. But somehow Buck Landers seemed closer to her than ever before. She had taken the first step into his realm. It was a world wherein he was almost a king. People gave way for him, doorms were eager for his nod of recognition.

She heard a whisper from behind her. "There goes Buck Landers." And another, "Pipe the classy dame wit' him!"

ASKED FOR MONEY

For the first time Mary was beginning to contrast him with younger men. His gaunt hardness was unlike their lithe elasticity, his skin lacked freshness. But he was nevertheless in an admirable prime, a strange little touch of grimness. "Well, he's not an old fool, anyway."

How potent he was she had opportunity to learn immediately and by chance. They were just out of the building when they were suddenly closed around by three or possibly four dark-skinned men. Beyond any question Landers and Mary were being slowly hunted apart from the crowd. In a moment they were in what almost resembled a football huddle on the fringe of the mass of departing fans.

Landers was undisturbed, his lips scornful. His gaze centered on one of the evil faces.

"Well, Benny, what's the idea?" he demanded contemptuously.

Benny's voice was cringing, yet tinged with a veiled wickedness. "Why Mr. Landers, we just wanted to speak to you a minute. On business. All we want is just a little loan. A couple of grand'll do fine—"

"And what makes you think you can get away with this idea?" Landers asked curiously.

NOT FRIGHTENED

"Maybe because you cleared up $6 grand in bets on Leeds tonight," returned the other, a sinister leisure in his tone. "No hard feelings, Mr. Landers, but us boys can do you a lot of good in one way and another. We're not trying to make any heavy tap. Just a friendly little loan when you won't miss it much."

"Listen, rats! I don't deal with your kind. Out of my way!"

His words stabbed Mary with a cold excitement, peculiarly she was afraid—not for herself or Landers—but for the men. Landers had a dangerous fundamental courage, the others were mere thugs. A baleful menace glistened in his cold eyes and the toughs almost visibly, cowered. It was as though a harsh mental force had been thrown against them. They fell back silently and allowed Mary and Landers to pass.

As he escorted her to the parking place of his car, she was pale but otherwise unshaken. "I was sure you were going to have some trouble with them," she told him.

"I wasn't," he returned grimly.

"Will they bother you again?"

"Probably not—they're stooped at the start. I never worry about things like that."

"I think you're awfully brave," she confided to him in the car. "They were so terrible looking."

Landers gave his chauffeur a crisp order to drive up through Central Park. "I don't believe you were a bit frightened," he asserted admiringly.

"I wasn't—because you weren't."

"I like to hear you talk that way," Landers replied. "You're my kind of a girl. I don't like men, or women either, who get squeamish."

VISIONS HAPPINESS

There was a menace in his even voice, a frigid echo that bore out Mary's faith in his strength.

"Well, we won't either of us worry about it any more," she responded more lightly.

Another thing she liked about him too, was that he made no attempt to embrace her in the car. He appeared to have none of the swift eagerness of passionate youth. Somehow she felt a little grateful toward him for that.

They were gliding through the winding drives of the park all around them was duskiness, while the sky was softly illuminated from New York's jeweled towers of light. The richness, the smoothness of the car conveyed to Mary a sense of luxurious privacy. There was a magic in the wealth that enabled them so easily to escape the city's pressure and congestion.

"I don't suppose you ever pictured yourself caring for a hard bird like me?" he said unexpectedly.

She was silent.

"I've led the kind of life that made me hard," he explained. "When I was a kid I was a mule skinner in railroad camps. I've been dealing with hard people all my life and I had to be harder than they were. But I wouldn't be hard toward anybody I cared about. I could be actually good to the right person. You, for instance. I can see myself happily married and getting away from a lot of this racket. For the right woman I'd make a good husband, and she could have everything."

Throughout all of her mind, throughout all of her slim young being, Mary sensed his inward desire, a sharpened reaction to living that was renewal to the man's youth. To the right woman, she truly believed, he really would make a good husband, a powerful mate.

"It would be nice to be the right woman," she said, "but I don't think you have found her in me."

"In all of New York and in all my life you are the best bet I've come across," he stated. "How does that make you feel when I tell you that?"

THINKS OF MOTHER

"I think it flatters my vanity."

"I could make you happy," he said steadily. "You like me now, but I think I could make you love me, and if you love me it would be perfect, wouldn't it."

"Yes—if I loved you."

"I'm rotten at this love making," Landers stated as the limousine rolled on, "but I'm smarter than you are. I can see farther. Our marriage won't be a failure because I never make failures. If you're the thoroughbred I think you are you're game enough to take the gamble and marry me. I'll give you everything—you'll live like a queen. And don't kid yourself—you'll like it. You'll be the pride of my life and you'll live with your head up in the stars."

His offer somehow brought back to Mary the swift, vivid recollection of her mother's words. They rang in Mary's ears—the pitiful pleadings against poverty, the heartbreak of a thwarted life. Miraculously the doors of plenty and fulfillment had been opened to Mary. It was within her grasp, the fullness of life, the bounteous joys of an enriched freedom from want. As though a voice from the grave were speaking, an insistant urge kept drumming in her ears. "Accept him! Accept him!"

"The principal trouble with marriage today," says a psychologist, "is that men and women are afraid of each other."

And the big trouble with a lot of marriages is that they don't get afraid of each other soon enough.

The Six-Hour Day Is Practical

The six-hour day is coming to this country and no power on earth can stop it.

When laborers worked from fourteen to twenty hours a day, they were treated as criminals when they begged and demanded shorter hours of work.

Short-sighted employers did not know or did not want to know that the man who works happily for a reasonable length of time is more efficient and more useful than his brother who toils in drudgery and goes from work to bed and from bed to his work again. They did not want to know.

They did not know what the intelligent employers of America knew—that there are direct parallels between short hours and high wages and increased profits and general prosperity. But the 10-hour day and the eight-hour day came at last, and convicted them of obstinate stupidity.

Even in this country there are capitalists who will fight the further shortening of the hours of labor. They will ask:

"When is this thing going to end! If the workers get a six-hour day, soon they will be asking for a four-hour day and at last we shall be paying them a full day's wage for doing nothing."

"This thing" will end when the able capitalist divides the profits of modern efficiency, made possible by organization and new machines, more fairly among the men whom he employs.

Many employers, under the pressure of the depression, have already done this. The Manufacturing Chemists' Association of leading corporations in the chemical industry, have recently established a six-hour day in order to give work to the largest possible number of men—and it has worked well.

It has worked so very well as emergency relief, that the president of one of the big corporations says:

"It may well be that it will become a permanent policy."

In times of stress and peril, wise men do things they should have done before, and find their accomplishment easy. So it will be with the six-hour day, and when it is accepted everywhere in the big industries of America it will show its many benefits.

It will help to pull us up out of the depression.

It will give jobs to useful workers who have been displaced by machines.

It will increase their productivity. It did so, from 3 to 4 per cent, in one cereal plant where it has been tried.

It will give workers more time for recreation, for development, for education.

It will make both labor and capital more secure in these United States.

And it will prove that any man who opposes it now does not really understand his own business.

Fighting Election Fraud

Judge Macfarlane's Attitude Towards Wilmerding Complainants Causes Comment.

Judge Macfarlane yesterday showed little sympathy with the Wilmerding independent Republicans who are striving to break the stranglehold that the Volpe gangsters, some of them men with criminal records, hold on that borough.

Judge Macfarlane did not know, perhaps, that the men who are leading the fight against election frauds in Wilmerding are doing so with the feeling that they are taking their lives in their hands, and that the greatest difficulty has been experienced in getting witnesses to testify because of their fear of assassination. Perhaps he would have been more kindly in his attitude if he had known these things.

The seriousness of the situation in Wilmerding is indicated by the fact that the primary returns from the Wilmerding district controlled by the Volpes were thrown out by the Return Board and a number of the members of the election board indicted on charges of fraud.

It is reassuring to learn that the drastic cut that is being made in municipal expenses is not due, as some feared, to imminent depletion of the city treasury but to the desire to carry over into next year an unexpended balance from 1930, so as to make a tax cut easier. Let the administration be given credit for what seems an earnest effort to reduce the taxpayer's burden.

But sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. Six thousand city employes are to have their pay cut, either through reduction of salary or by being required to take vacations without pay. Why should not the Mayor, and the department heads, and the Councilmen also help, if not by cutting their salary rates, then by returning a week's pay or so to the city treasury?

Ordinarily from eight to nine months elapse after a bank closes before the depositors receive any of their money. A vigorous movement has been started in Philadelphia to expedite the time, so that depositors in some of the banks recently closed may receive a dividend before Christmas. Statements in regard to this from the State and Federal banking departments would be welcome.

The announcement that the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad will abandon passenger service on November 1 marks the end of an ambitious project. The road would have been glad many years ago to give up its passenger trains, having found them unprofitable. Fortunately the discontinuance of the service will be less of a hardship now than then. Buses will supply the deficiency.

It is gratifying to note that the public outcry against the defacing of walls and buildings with the candidates' posters in the primary campaign was not wholly in vain. Four of the offenders pleaded guilty in Criminal Court Friday. The costs assessed against them and Judge Patterson's censure should have a salutary effect in future campaigns.

The international exhibition of paintings at Car- negie Institute continues to be an interesting topic of conversation. Some of the more beautiful of the pictures, including the vivid Venetian scene, "At the Regatta," by Italico Brass, will be reproduced in full color in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph to be issued tomorrow.

The Sunday Sun-Telegraph will also be notable for its fiction. A new serial, "The House Next Door," a tale of love, mystery, thrills and terror, by Burton Stevenson, will be begun, and the first three chapters of another fascinating serial, "The Love Trap," by Robert Terry Shannon, will be reprinted. There will be many other features worthy of everyone's attention.

Bouquets for the Blonde

I'm going to be a blonde! A blonde with a platinum finish!

All my life I have longed to have golden hair—and here's a bottle that says I can do it in 30 minutes. Well—here goes! I'm only a brunette—so I have nothing to lose.

* * *

"Why all this flurry about BLONDES?" writes "A Blonde," who signs no name. "Did they do you 'dirt' or something?"

(DID they? Oh, Blondie, if you only KNEW! Next to a double-chin, there is nothing that I fear so much as a genuine blonde. Not even a red-head.)

"Really, I am surprised," she continues, "to hear everybody knocking the blondes. Yet the blondes aren't knocking anyone. They go on their way—the butt and envy of everyone. Please give us a hand, once in awhile."

Little Girl, you don't need a hand—except to hold the bouquets with! It's we brunettes who need all the consolation and the flattery we can get. As you say, you merely "go on your way"—and there's nothing left for us, when you get past.

No man would consider existence complete, unless he had loved at least one blonde. No matter how much a man's taste and fancy may run to brunettes, there has always been a blonde in his life!

Tell a woman that you saw her husband dancing with a stunning brunette and she'll probably shrug her shoulders and snub you. Tell her that you saw him pirouetting with a blonde—and she will go up in the air like a box of fireworks. She can forgive another woman almost anything, except being a blonde. It's just the IDEA of the thing!

In order to get into a man's consciousness, a brunette must be brilliant, rich, chic, witty or beautiful — SOMETHING besides a brunette. But a blonde doesn't have to be anything but a blonde!

A brunette has to struggle her way into marriage, over all a man's prejudices, his suspicions, and his sense of self-preservation. He is never quite sure that she hasn't a dagger in her garter or an automatic up her sleeve. But, a blonde looks so harmless and helpless, that she lolls all his fears to sleep, and quietly marries him, before he wakes up.

Blondes are more coquettish than brunettes—and less demanding. More clinging—and less temperamental. More restful—and less stimulating. A brunette is inclined to be emotional. But a blonde just leans back and lets "George" do all the worrying—and loving. Which is why gentlemen prefer blondes.

Hand me the peroxide, Felice! But, I know, though I may use a dozen bottles, I shall never really be a BLONDE. Because, I can't make my temperament blonde.

* * *

Still, it's a wonder what a head of glistening platinum hair will do to make their eyes light up as you pass!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—This has been one of those drizzling days with a clinging chill when instead of mooning over a typewriter one has a letch to polish a bench by the fireside. I've wound up run down clocks, looked up funny words in the dictionary and yanked a few gray hairs out of my eyebrows.

On top of this, everybody is away for the day and I'm alone. One of those shrieking winds whips through building canyons. In the midst of the storm the doorbell rang and a man inquired: "Do you happen to know what a coping is?" I said I did. "Well," he explained, "your's has blown down."

To touch off a little cheer I fiddled with the radio and for no reason whatever got to talking back to announcers, speakers and performers. As each new voice was wafted over the air I sassed it with cutting sarcasm. And I haven't had so much fun since the old parchesi days.

One of the first broadcasts was a furniture convention program out in Grand Rapids. In the midst of an uproarious burst of applause I screamed: "Three chairs for Grands Rapids!"—which I still think a honey. Another speaker was saying: "A glorious sun came up like—" and faltered.

I yelled "A Sweet Cap ad" to help him out. A fellow in a tremolo voice was rhapsodizing about his family—his sweet faced mother, his father, his wife and children. As he finished I trilled: "And your Uncle Eppis, how is he?" I could have kept you laughing this way for hours.

But trying to be funny without an audience is rather monotonous. So I decided to sort neckties. I had sorted the reds and was sorting the purples when the telephone rang. "What are you doing?" a voice asked. I replied I was sorting ties.

"You are what?" I felt silly, but repeated: "Sorting ties." A silence, then: "What are you trying to do, kid me?" I said I wasn't and added lamely: "Can't a fellow sort ties if he wants?" He answered: "Surely. And when you are through come over and sort my wife's suede gloves and we'll serve tea and play clap in and clap out." And hung up.

Will Rogers brightened things with a night letter, reading: "Thanks. Odd, for that piece about me in Cosmopolitan. Ray Long sent me an advanced proof. You sure had to tell some whoppers to make me out a regular fellow. It may offset the terrible opinions of some of the intellectuals. Those birds have never been able to figure out why you and I haven't starved to death long ago. If it wasn't for our own country folk we would, too. Betty joins me in best to you all. Come on out to Hollywood. It was never funnier than right now. Give Irvin my regards."

Then a blistering billet doux from Nogales, Ariz.: "Listen, seed wart, what gives you the idea of being front parlor toward Polly Moran? Whether you think so or not—and who gives a hoot nanny!—that gal is a she clown. I wish you'd hit this strip of desert some day with those sissy spats and that frightened gazelle puss. Would we give you a nice piute ride across the burning sands O, Clementine!" He sounds positively uncouth to me.

And a shaft of prison philosophy post-carded out of a Chicago jail: "After all, Al Capone gives his customers hooch and only a fleeting headache when he takes our coin. But some of your New York bankers gave customers only a lifelong heartache. But they'll send Al to jail and pity your bankers as 'overzealous financiers.' But that red in the sky is not all dying sunset, Mister."

* * *

Late in the afternoon, to add to the gloom, the Lady-Across-the-Hall caught me sneak thieving. Her paper arrives a few minutes before mine. I reached around a fluted pillar and picked her's up and stepped inside my door just to cop a peek at the headlines. She came suddenly out, buzzed for the elevator and was told her paper had been delivered. I waited a few moments, and was just placing it where it belonged when she opened the door again. "I see you take the Evening Journal," I said brightly, which is the only thing I could think of. "I do when I can get it," she replied, and for a few days my gangway will be via the rear elevator.

Anyway, when they leave me all alone on a rainy day this way they ought to give me some paper dolls to cut out or some spools on a string with which to play. Said our hero, refusing stubbornly to end a sentence with a preposition.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Those proud parents who protect and program every move their youngsters make—

Those pesty parents who nag and meddle, hinder or hurt—

And all those other parents, pesty, proud, or otherwise, who won't let the kid call his soul his own, but try to run the show for him—

Looking them over, I often think of that incident in the life of young Jesus. Remember? Gentle Mary, kindly Joseph had come up from Nazareth to pay their yearly dues to Rome, bringing the 12-year-old boy with them. No need to worry over him as they went about their various errands . . . he was a steady, serious little lad, wise beyond his years.

Imagine their surprise, then, when they discovered that he was not with the travelers when they returned home. Distracted, Mary and Joseph retraced their steps to the city, asking for him as they went. At last they found him. Sitting in the court of the temple, talking with the rabbis—asking questions, arguing, as has been the way of little boys since time immemorial.

Being properly respectful, the Scriptures do not say exactly what happened. But I suspect that, despite her gentleness and his kindliness, Mary and Joseph acted as anxious parents usually do act and gave the runaway a piece of their minds.

Then came those words, with which Youth has answered Age—since Youth first went adventuring and Age first started worrying.

Calm eyed, certain, the boy faced them.

"Wist ye not that I was about my Father's business?" he said.

His Father—that mysterious source that is the father of all young things.

His Father's business—not merely this particular business of debating religion with the rabbis in the temple court, but that vast and equally sacred business of LEARNING TO LIVE. That business of learning to live by wondering and questioning, marveling and doubting . . . by asking questions and making experiments and staging rebellions and sticking his nose in where it didn't belong—

His Father's business OF LEARNING TO LIVE—

His Father's business OF FINDING THE TRUTH FOR HIMSELF—

Little Christ Jesus had been about that business. Every little child is about that business. That is the most important business on earth for him to be about—and every parent should help him on his way.

BUT HOW MANY WILL? How many parents will let a youngster be HIMSELF . . . His own, unique, individual self? How many will let him come to his own conclusions about life . . . even if his own conclusions lead him into disaster?

"But I don't want my boy to be hurt," says an adoring mother. "I don't want him to make unnecessary mistakes. I want him to know everything that is beautiful and happy and wise—"

And so that's your excuse for meddling and interfering with "his father's business," is it? And you call it love? Yes, we mothers call that love. I know. I meddled, too.

But how are we to know what's best for our children, my dear? They're not our children, after all. They're Life's children. And perhaps Life knows that your boy needs to be hurt. And maybe no mistake is "unnecessary"—perhaps mistakes are the most necessary and valuable things that happen to us. And as for the things that are "beautiful and happy and wise"—how shall we find our way to pity and understanding and strength if we have no contact with ugliness or sadness or weakness?

Their father's business . . . their father's noble and mysterious business of learning to live—they are on that, our little runaway children. Help them!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

Too much time is spent in reading which is of no value except amusement.

Better to sit and do nothing than to fill your mind with a lot of silly ideas and improbable situations gained from the wrong variety of reading.

Trashy reading may have such a hold on you that you have become a poor companion in your home.

It is not surprising that many couples fail to enjoy their homes together because of the desire of one of the combination for reading things of no value.

It is a poor partner who would complain about the reading of anything which provides information or improves the mind.

But a husband or a wife must have much forbearance to stand uncomplainingly for hours of time wasted in fiction by the life partner who is only satisfying a taste for some of the stuff written by certain authors.

Then there is the solitaire player.

Could anything be worse in the way of useless time squandering?

Surely there is more in life than to "pass away time."

If your desires and inclinations are so shallow you need mental stimuli,

Do something that will increase your brain power. The right kind of reading helps.

Text for Today This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—I. Timothy, i:15.

Taking Uncle Sam For a 'Buggy Ride'

By Claude G. Bowers

There unquestionably is a campaign of slander in progress in Europe against the United States, and it is not aimed at our bucolic simplicity so much as at our institutions and our dollar. In a recent issue of the Magazine of Wall Street, John C. Cresswill discusses the rather insolent attitude of those who have come to us, time and again, for help, and always got it, under the caption, "Has Europe Taken America for a Buggy Ride?" With the attack upon the dollar in progress now, with the almost gleeful prediction of some of our English "friends" that we are headed for a collapse, we are about to be approached with the proposition to lift at least half the burden of the foreign debt off the shoulders of the people who borrowed and transfer it to the backs of American taxpayers. It would seem that in the hysteria of the moment, Europe is not playing a very clever game. One does not ordinarily begin a plea for help by making faces at the person to be asked. The editor of the magazine makes a suggestion that might well be flashed to Washington:

"The time has come when Americans might better expend less effort in trying to save the world and more on strengthening our institutions at home."

There's a message for Garcia!

Americans Have Enough To Do at Home Just Now

It would be absurd to assume a position of utter indifference to whatever may occur in Europe. A complete collapse over there, however, would not necessarily mean utter ruin here, and there are countries in Europe that are in a better condition financially and in the matter of employment than we are in America. There is no indication that France is staggering; and Italy is not on the verge of bankruptcy. England is in a bad way, and Germany undoubtedly is in a serious plight. There is one lesson to be drawn from the condition in France to which reference is seldom made. That is, that Americans have enough to do at home just now to put their own house in order. The administration leaders, with their backs to America, are anxiously gazing across the Atlantic, eager to get into the troubles over there; let them turn around and see what they can see in this country.

And let them do something about it.

We Saved the Allies And Reaped Ingratitude

Many of us have not shared in prejudices against England for many years, for we would prefer to be her friends. But we have not been particularly happy in the results of our responses to the Macedonian cry for help from that quarter. In 1916 and early in 1917, Lloyd George, from England, was sending us frantic messages to rush our soldiers to the battlefields of Flanders or England would go down with the Allies before the fire of Germany. "For God's sake hurry," was the Lloyd George message.

And we hurried; and we saved the Allies from defeat; and the moment the Armistice was signed we began to hear that we had done nothing at all. We had the same experience with France, though it was not so gross. But the gratitude for service rendered at that time had cooled before the boys came home. That is the reason some of them, with bad manners of course, but with a lot of human nature marched to the boats that were to bring them home singing:

"We've paid our debt to Lafayette,
Who the hell do we owe now."

Campaign of Slander In Attack on Dollar

Then came the peace settlement and we took nothing. The other countries took all they could get. And ever since we have been helping out with money. Our bankers have loaned about five billion dollars to help out; and we scaled the debts owing us from these nations down by billions—only to hear that we are "Shylocks." Only the other day we loaned some hundreds of millions to England to save the pound, on the assurance that this would do the work, and almost immediately we got the news of failure.

And now a clever statesman is here to ask us to cancel half the debts and collect the other half, five and a half billion dollars, from the people of this country through taxation.

Isn't it a little stupid—or hysterical—for England and France just now to be engaged in a campaign of petty slander in their attack upon the dollar?

In view of our own condition here, perhaps it would be just as well for us to give a little more attention to ourselves, and not so much to others. Our Administration leaders can well postpone world leadership for themselves until by doing an infinitely better job than they yet have done, they demonstrate some constructive and effective leadership at home.

England Long Neglectful Of Her Own People

We wonder if England's plight is not due, in part, to the fact that for so many years, yes, generations, her statesmen had their minds so much on world power that they neglected doing the needed work at home. The triumphs of Disraeli and Palmerson did not check the downward slide of the great mass of the workers in England. Now she finds herself harassed with a numerically powerful proletariat which threatens to overthrow everything. English statesmanship was so much occupied with Turkey, Greece, China and Egypt, that it had no time, until it may be too late, to do the needful things for their own people.

Things We Can Do To Help the World

There are some things that would help the world that we can do; and in doing them help ourselves. We did the world no good when we decided it would be wise to refuse to buy; and we did ourselves infinite harm, because we are now in a condition where we cannot sell. But the administration, refusing to see that prosperity demands world trade, will not listen to the suggestion of scaling the tariff wall down; for it appears to feel that we are politically one with the rest of the world.

We are running a deficit of a billion dollars.

We have at least 6,000,000 breadwinners out of work.

That means, with the dependents, about 20,000,000 in distress.

Hundreds of thousands of farms will be foreclosed this winter, because agriculture is in ruins.

The mining industry is wrecked, and our indifference is converting the mining regions of Pennsylvania and Kentucky into breeding grounds for Communism.

With these conditions here at home it is not reassuring to find the Administration leaders standing on the seashore with their backs to this continent peering anxiously into the wreckage in Europe and wondering what they can do about that; let them turn around and seek solutions for the problems here. Let them give us what we do not have today—American leadership in America, by—

Doing something to put the jobless to work and to reassure them as to the future.

Doing something to save agriculture from a common bankruptcy.

Doing something toward recovering the lost market of getting rid of the tariff monstrosity through which we have lost them.

Doing something to bring the mining industry out of chaos.

Doing something—HERE!
